EXCERPTS FROM VETO MESSAGE OF COOLIDGE.
Washington, May 15.—In stating his reasons for vetoing the soldier bonus bill, President Coolidge said:

Our first concern must be the nation as a whole.

The one compelling desire and demand of the people today, irrespective of party or class, is for tax relief.

If this bill becomes a law, we wipe out at once almost all the progress five hard years have accomplished in reducing the national debt.

The veterans themselves would be better off to make that payment (the $40 a year which would pay for the average policy provided under the bill) and be relieved of the attendant high taxes and high living costs which such legislation would impose upon them.

The expenditures proposed in this bill are against the interests of the whole people. I do not believe they are for the benefit of the veterans.

Such action (for an additional cash bonus) logically would be encouraged if this bill becomes a law.

The intent of this bill . . . falls into the position of a plain grantuity.

We owe no bonus to able-bodied veterans of the world war.

We must either abandon our theory of patriotism or abandon this bill.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.
Washington, May 15.—Contending flatly that the country owes no bonus to the veterans of the world war, President Coolidge vetoed the soldier bonus bill and sent it back to congress Thursday.

The big surprise in the message was the vigorous attack on the principle of any immediate financial disav-antages.

"We owe no bonus to the able-bodied veterans of the world war,"
the president said in his veto message. "The first duty of every citizen is to the nation. We must either abandon our theory of patriotism or abandon this bill."

This is the gist of Coolidge's op-

PUBLICITY CLAUSE IN NEW TAX BILL MAY BE KILLED

House Democrats Are Not Solid Behind Provision—Garner Opposes Amendment.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.
Washington, May 15.—(Special.)—
The amendment to the tax bill providing publicity of all tax returns, one of the most radical changes sought in a long time in the eyes of many members of congress, is in danger of being knocked out of the measure in the conference now going on.

While democrats in the senate joined with republican insurgents in placing this provision in the bill, house democrats are not so strongly behind it, and both Representatives Garner, of Texas, and Collier, of Mississippi, democratic conferees on the bill from the house, do not like the Norris amendment opening tax returns to full publicity and will join with republicans in opposing it in conference.

Further, Chairman Cordell Hull, of the democratic national committee, is opposed to this change. There is the likelihood, of course, that some modified publicity, under strict regulation, may be placed in the bill.

Hull Labeled on Bill.
The house bill has a provision for limited publicity opening tax returns to congressional committees at their request, but this can come only upon order of the president and under rules and regulations prescribed and approved by the secretary of the treasury. House conferees, including the democrats, will fight to keep this provision in the final measure.

Representative Hull had much to do with framing the present income tax law. As a member of the ways and means committee in 1912 and 1913 he worked out the details of the bill that finally became a law. In a letter to a friend he said: "Whatever may be thought or said to the contrary, there is a phase of human nature which while entirely willing to make full and complete returns of income and pay taxes accordingly in the belief that all taxpayers are receiving equitable treatment, is at the same time utterly adverse to the idea of general publicity of private business methods and private business affairs."

Fears Discredit to Law.
"I strongly favor any and every kind of publicity needed with respect to all phases of our financial and industrial activities, but I think it unwise in the light of almost universal experience in the past to discredit or break down the income tax system, or seriously jeopardize it, by utilizing this law instead of some separate law or laws for publicity purposes."

When asked for his views on the pending provision, Mr. Hull called at-

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.
The committee to select the place of meeting for the Southern Baptist convention for next year today will recommend that Memphis be named.
Report to this effect was circulated at the Auditorium Thursday afternoon.

A schedule of tentative appointments for visiting preachers in Atlanta churches for next Sunday morning and night services was read late Thursday afternoon. Dr. George W. Truett, of Texas, is slated to preach at the Auditorium Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dr. E. Y. Mullins at the First Baptist at the morning hour, and Dr. O. C. S. Wallace at night, and Dr. H. A. Porter at the Second Baptist in the morning and Dr. John Bynes at night.

Attention of the Baptist convention was again directed to a statement of doctrine and principle when Dr. H.
K. Maiden, editor of Word and Way, of Kansas City, introduced a paper setting forth the Baptist position and principle of faith. The resolution was referred to the resolution committee.

Assails Modernism.
Asserting that modernism is destructive of vital elements of Christian faith, and affirming belief in the Bible as the divinely inspired word of God, the resolution as accepted unequivocally commits the Southern Baptist denomination to full belief in the following points:

The deity of Jesus Christ, that He is the Son of God and God the Son;
in His miraculous and virgin birth; in His vicarious and atoning death; in His bodily resurrection; in His ascension and intercession; in His personal, bodily, visible return to the world, and in the infallibility of His teachings.

The resolution further affirms these doctrines as vital and fundamental, and that any denial of them is gross heresy and destructive of the Christian faith. Further, the convention declared through this paper its unalterable opposition to an unproved theory, to any kind of philosophy, to anything called science that questions, discredits or denies any of these fundamentals.

The resolution is different from another that was offered the first day only in its method of application. The first resolution, as offered by Dr.
Stealey, stipulated that all officers, teachers, directors and trustees of schools supported by the Southern Baptist convention should be required

SECRETARY HUGHES RAPS LAX JURIES

Legal Delays, Lenient Sentences Bring Contumely on Laws of United States, He Says.

New York, May 15.—Judges are too lenient and criminal processes are too dilatory, Secretary of State Hughes, former justice of the supreme court and one of the most noted jurists of the country, declared in an address before the National Institute of Social Sciences here Thursday night.

Perhaps the crassest concern today," Hughes said, "is the inadequacy and lax enforcement of law through the deficiency of the administration of the criminal law.

"Criminal processes are too dilatory, juries are too indulgent, judges are too lenient in sentences.

"One thing is certain, life and

COURT IN MOSCOW CONDEMNNS WOMAN, DENIES AMNESTY

Moscow, May 15.—Marie Beiter, daughter of a Russian nobleman, was sentenced to death by a Moscow district court today for "active operations against the labor class." She stood her trial stoically, was easily-mannered and answered snilingly the questions which the judges put to her.

She was charged with having been in the service of the secret police during the czarist regime for 14 years, with having furnished the imperial authorities with information on the activities of Russian revolutionists within the country and abroad, and with having betrayed a number of communist party workers. Amnesty was denied her.

GOVERNOR DENIES PLEA FOR MERCY FOR SATTERFIELD

"Fair Name of Our State Has Been Blackened by This Crime," Says Walker in Refusal.

His attitude of stoic indifference to his fate unchanged, J. B. Satterfield Thursday received the news in his cell in Fulton tower that Governor Clifford Walker had refused to interfere with the sentence of death imposed upon him by a Fulton county jury, following his conviction for the slaying of his brother-in-law, R. H.
Hart, in December, 1921.

Told that his last hope had gone,
and that he must pay for his crime on the end of the hangman's rope on Friday, May 23, the slayer received the news calmly. Sitting on a cot in his tiny, dark cell, he merely smiled and remarked that finally he was grasping the idea that, inasmuch as there had been a killing, the law demanded a life in return.

"Atrocious" Murder.
Governor Walker, in a lengthy statement given out Thursday morning, declared that the crime for which Satterfield is to hang was a "murder as atrocious as was ever recorded in the history of crime in Georgia." He admitted that many arguments in favor of commutation have been advanced before him, but stated that they do not affect the record in this case, but were actually arguments against capital punishment.
Such arguments, he said, should be addressed to the legislature, if it is desired to change the law.

"Human life is too cheap in Georgia," wrote the governor in winding up his statement. "The fair name of our state has been blackened by crime. There must be a limit. The criminally inclined must be taught that punishment is certain and that he who is guilty of murder will be severely punished. Such an early Thursday morning, ended his life by shooting himself through the left temple in the basement of his home, 2560 Peachtree road, will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon from the residence, with Rev. J. W.

Stevenson, pastor of the Buckhead Presbyterian church, officiating. Inter-

Letters found in the dead man's automobile were turned over to the family by Coroner Paul Donelson, who said they were of a purely personal nature, and shed no light on possible causes Mr. McCullough's act. The inquest, originally set for 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, has been postponed until 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Illness with which Mr. McCullough was stricken suddenly while attending a party Wednesday night is thought to have led to suicide. Mr.

OLIVER KROEGER KILLED CLEANING GUN AT RESIDENCE

Body Is Discovered More Than Hour After His Death by Eleven-Year-Old Nephew.

WIFE HAD BEGGED HIM TO GET RID OF GUN

Negro Boy Had Been Wounded While Kroeger Was Cleaning His Weapon Once Before.

A bullet from the rifle he was cleaning, sent crashing through his brain when the gun accidentally was discharged late Thursday afternoon, ended the life of Oliver H. Kroeger, city fireman, as he sat in the bedroom of his home at 570 Lawton street.

The body was discovered more than an hour later by the dead man's 11-year-old nephew, Samuel Cohen, of 578 Lawton street, who had come to invite his uncle to supper at the Cohen residence. The boy, frightened, was afraid to touch the body, and ran screaming to his home next door to notify Mrs. Kroe-ger and his mother.

Physicians were notified immediately, but the veteran fireman had been dead for some time, according to their verdict. Mrs. Kroe-ger collapsed when notified of the accident, and was placed under a doctor's care.

Discharged Once Before.

Mrs. Kroe-ger, before she went to the Cohen home at about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, had asked her husband not to clean the gun, she told police, as it had been accidentally discharged when Kroe-ger was cleaning it once before, wounding a negro boy who was standing near. Mrs. Kroeger had lived in fear of the gun since that time, and repeatedly had asked her husband to sell or give it away.

Police predicate that a verdict of accidental death will be returned at the coroner's inquest today. They say that judging by the position in which the body and gun were found, there was no possible chance for either suicide or murder. The body had not been touched when police arrived, and was found slumped in a chair, with the butt of the gun resting on the floor, and the barrel, clutched in Kroe-ger's hand, pointing up. Any suicide theory was dissolved by Mrs.
Kroe-ger's statements, as he said that he was in the best of health, and had no particular troubles nor worries.

Tribute Paid Kroe-ger.
Kroe-ger, who had been connected with engine house No. 5 for more than four years, was paid high tribute by Fire Chief W. B. Cody, who praised his loyalty and efficiency.
"He had imperiled his own life many times in order to save life and property of others," Chief Cody said, "and was the type of man who is a credit to the department."

Kroe-ger was a member of the night watch at the fire station, and had spent Thursday at home. He and Mrs. Kroe-ger frequently visited the Cohen home, and had planned to eat

Only Two Auto Accidents Are Reported Thursday; Baptist Minister May Die

Constitution Is Praised
For Aid in Traffic War

That the wave of speeding and reckless driving which, during recent weeks, has engulfed Atlanta and left a trail of death and suffering in its wake, is definitely breaking on the rocks of police vigilance, was the statement Thursday night of Councilman E. H. Inman, chairman of the police committee of council, and Acting Chief of Police E. L. Jett.

Both these officials were in agreement in praising The Constitution for the campaign of "pitiless publicity" it has conducted to check the death toll taken by accidents, and both declared that The Constitution was the greatest factor in the victory which they already foresee in the drive to make Atlanta safe.

"The police department is getting the traffic situation well in hand now and with the continued active cooperation of the press and law-abiding people of Atlanta, the police committee believes that the safety of the streets of Atlanta can be restored and maintained henceforth," Chairman Inman asserted.

"I do not believe that law-enforcement authorities of the city could have found more effective outside support for their work than The Constitution has given voluntarily through publication of the names of traffic offenders. It has made others more careful not to become identified with those who are responsible for the serious situation from which the city is now emerging."

"The splendid cooperation of The Constitution during the crusade is exceedingly gratifying to the department," Chief Jett said.
"The Constitution, in giving impetus to the war on traffic violators at its inception, and in constantly supporting it, has materially helped the police make Atlanta's streets safe even for little children and has eliminated one of the gravest situations which has ever existed in the city. The results for good secured since Monday is sufficient evidence of its great influence."

87 New Traffic Cases Are Made; 40 Offenders Fined by Recorder

Continuing their war against speeding, reckless driving and violations of traffic rules, Atlanta policemen Thursday docketed cases against 87 persons, 16 of whom were charged with speeding, seven with reckless driving and 64 with the blanket term of "violating traffic ordinances."

In recorder's court Thursday, 40 persons were convicted of traffic violations and assessed aggregate fines of $402. Nine

Rev. R. L. Byrd, of St.
Pauls, N. C., Here for Convention, Is Injured
by Heavy Truck.

POLICE VIGILANCE
CURBING MOTORISTS

Forty-Eight Cases Are Tried in Recorder's Court, Resulting in Forty Convictions.

While police vigilance remained un-relaxed in the war to curb reckless motorists, a great shrinkage in the number of arrests Thursday attested to the fact that the police drive is succeeding in making Atlanta safe for drivers and pedestrians alike.

The dar, however, was marked by two accidents, in one of which Rev.
R. L. Byrd, 60-year-old pastor of the First Baptist church of St. Pauls, N. C., and a delegate to the Southern Baptist convention, was injured, probably fatally. In the other accident, Mrs. C. H. Jennings, of 332 Courtland street, was hurt slightly when struck by a taxicab.

The total of new cases docketed during the day was 87, of which number 16 were charged with speeding, 7 with reckless driving and 64 with the blanket term, "violating traffic regulations."

In recorder's court, 48 cases were tried, resulting in 40 convictions.
Nine were fined for speeding, four for reckless driving and 27 for violating other traffic rules.

NORTH CAROLINA BAPTIST MINISTER BADLY INJURED.

Dr. Byrd was injured Thursday afternoon when struck by a heavy truck driven by G. E. Lewis, 22, of 203 Oak street, at Ivy Street and Exchange place. Lewis was arrested on charges of reckless driving, and is held without bond pending outcome of Dr. Byrd's injuries.

Dr. Byrd's injuries consist of a fractured leg, broken nose, severe bruises and lacerations, and a possibly fractured skull. He is now at Grady hospital.

Lewis told police that the accident was unavoidable, and claims that Dr. Byrd stepped from behind a billboard directly in the path of the truck.

Lewis claims that he was going at a moderate rate of speed at the time of the crash, but did not see Dr.
Byrd in time to either stop or turn aside.

MRS. JENNINGS INJURED WHEN HIT BY TAXICAB.

Mrs. Jennings suffered slight injuries Thursday night when struck by a taxicab driven by A. J. Thompson, of 45 Chapel road, as she was crossing Courtland near Cain street.
Thompson was arrested by Call Officers Cartright and Stone, charged with reckless driving.

Thompson stopped after the mix-up, taking Mrs. Jennings to Grady hospital, and then reported the accident at police headquarters. He stated that he was traveling at a slow rate of speed, and that Mrs. Jennings ran into the street in the middle of the block, stepping in the path of his cab before he was able to stop.

POLICE ARE GRATIFIED OVER SUCCESS OF DAY.

Police officials were gratified Thursday night to note that, despite a day of great activity, only 87 cases had been docketed, declaring that this indicated the measure of

The interests of the people of the United States. The common virtues of loyalty, integrity and persistence in well doing command no headlines on the front page. Their fruit is of a different character and more enduring. But if honesty commands no headlines, dishonesty does, and the whole country well aware of what has been taking place. Because it is aware, the whole country is ashamed, indignant, and sick at heart.

"No Time to Hide Facts"

This is no time either to hide the facts or gloss over the offense. What is needed is neither whitewash nor concealment, but a frank, open and clear-eyed acknowledgment of the truth, acceptance of responsibility where responsibility properly lies, and an undiminished determination to clean up the mess.

Some people hold that the washing of dirty linen is an offense, that the thing to do with dirty linen is to hide it and never hang it out on the line. Others believe that it is better to wash it than to wear it. It looks that way to me.

Public linen cannot be washed except in public. You must wash it in public or help to hide misdoing by government officials. The fault is not with those who wash the dirty linen openly, but with those who made it need the washing in the first place.

Public Faith Shaken. Foreign relations, the tariff, the trusts, internal problems of every sort have been thrust into the background by the revelations of official misdoing in Washington. Public faith in the government is shaken. There is only one way to restore it. That is to remove the reason for distrust. And the only way to do that is to put on guard men whom the public respects—men in whom the people believe. There is no American whose hair is gray but has seen this government of ours administered on the highest plane of personal and official integrity and honor. It was done by the simple expedient of putting in high office men whose previous records make misdoing on their part clearly impossible. There are such men in America in plenty, and they can do again what men of the same type have done before.

No General Indictment.

There is no indictment against Americans in general in the oil scandals, but an indictment will be if we fail to insist on a clean sweep of the guilty, whether in the first, second, or third degree, and on such a house cleaning as will carry with it beyond question the complete restoration of public confidence.

This much is sure, that one of the greatest of all issues before the American people is honesty in government.

Teapot Dome is the glaring scandal of the moment, but in the weight of influence the dark waters of the American people it falls far behind that wider, deeper, and more abhorrent scandal which flows out of the failure to enforce the eighteenth amendment. For that failure the treasury department at Washington is directly responsible.

U. S. Has Sole Control, He Says.

Under the law the United States, and the United States only, has control of the breweries and alcohol distilleries, which are the chief sources of intoxicating drink. Under the law the United States alone, through the treasury department, has the power to control and check the flow of illegal liquor at its source. It can, but it does not. Over and over again I have pointed out just why the flood of illegal alcohol continues in Pennsylvania, just why the breweries continue to brew and distribute strong beer, and precisely what are the simple means by which both can be stopped. Washington refuses to put those means to use.

It happens that I believe in prohibition, but that has nothing to do with the effort I am making to enforce the eighteenth amendment in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The law is the law. It is my sworn duty as governor to see that the law is enforced. With every power I have I propose to carry that duty out without hesitation or compromise to the last hour of my administration.

Proud to Enforce Law.

I am glad to enforce the law, for

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1924.

I do not forget the immense benefits which the eighteenth amendment, in spite of poor enforcement, in spite of boozing, in spite of all the crime which follows the failure to enforce, is today conferring on the people of the United States. Neither do I forget the moral degradation which follows the law of any state. It contains a provision requiring secrecy of returns. A new progressive income tax law of Massachusetts requires secrecy except as to the name and address of the taxpayer.

"It will thus be seen from the proven experience of foreign countries, of our federal government, and of the states, which have the most successful revenue-producing income tax laws and which have been able most successfully to overcome the objection of inquisitoriality, that secrecy of returns has been found essential to this result."

returns could only be inspected in the office of the commissioner of internal revenue. This policy of secrecy was followed without particular objection or complaint until the repeal of the law.

Wisconsin has the most modern, successful and comprehensive income tax law of any state. It contains a provision requiring secrecy of returns. A new progressive income tax law of Massachusetts requires secrecy except as to the name and address of the taxpayer.

What is more, every official of town, county, or state, and every official of the nation itself, has taken the same oath. I have the choice to keep my oath, and with it my self-respect, or to disregard it. The evidence is clear that thousands of sworn officials have chosen not to keep their oath, and consequently have lost all title to respect of any kind as well as to the name of loyal American.

What passes my comprehension is how those who harp upon the sacredness of law, who exhaust themselves in denunciations of communism, belatedly, or anathematize attacks upon the constitution, should be so blind as not to see that their own repudiation of the constitution is a far more serious attack on law and order and the rights of property than that of any red. They themselves are actively undermining the institutions which, to hear them talk, they would suppose were dearer to them than their lives.

What folly! How can they choose which articles of the constitution they will disobey, and yet deny the same right to others?

What we need in law enforcement, just as we need it in the administration of the conservation policy and in Teapot Dome, is clear-eyed honesty in the corner of Whitehall and Trinity avenue. Satterfield chased his victim, Hart, from his home and shot him in the little store where he had taken refuge.

After the shooting Satterfield escaped the clutches of the law and for about a year was at liberty. Then, in his home in Los Angeles, he finally felt the touch of an officer's hand upon his shoulder. From that moment he began to walk the long path which will end, next Friday, on the death trap in Fulton tower.

Insanity His Defense.

At the trial, Satterfield's only defense was one of insanity. Previous to the trial of his younger daughter had committed suicide and he made a statement on the stand in which he talked of the spirit of the dead girl "leading him on."

Following a long legal battle, which finally ended when the state supreme court refused to order a new trial, Satterfield succeeded in escaping from the tower. He was at liberty for about eighteen hours.

"Natural Resources Are for All."

So solidly is conservation fixed in the public mind that the history of the fight against it is a story of "honored retreats" and broken careers on the part of its enemies in office. An attack on the policy of conservation, as the record shows, is the most disastrous enterprise that can be undertaken by a public man in America.

What conservation means is simply this: That the great natural resources with which our country is so richly endowed should be used for the benefit of all the people instead of mainly for the profit of a few of the people. The conservation policy holds especially that the natural riches in our public lands shall be neither wasted nor wantonly destroyed, but wisely and intelligently used and conserved for the service of those who are living today and, so far as we do not need them now, for the benefit of those who are coming after us.

Policy Is Obvious.

There was never a policy more obviously in the public interest, more evidently unattainable except by misrepresentation and crooked methods underneath. Such methods fail employed. The result to him all know. But the result to the country we shall not know until it appears whether or not the navy gets back its oil, and until what Fall did outside of oil is fully known.

For all these the conservation policy applies. Of late there has been added a new field for conservation, a natural outgrowth from what has gone before. This is the giant power policy, which holds that in the coming vast development of electrical energy from water power and coal, and its coming distribution to every factory and every home in America, the public welfare shall be kept clearly in mind. We undertook to regulate our railroads after they were built. The giant power policy asks us to plan out our future electrical system before it is built in such fashion as to insure both a fair return to its owners and builders and fair rates and conditions of service to the people. A stitch in time saves nine.

As with law enforcement, so with conservation. The American people have spoken. The policy is adopted. The thing of first necessity now is honesty in government, honesty in conservation, honesty in the execution of the law.

Tomorrow: Senator Thomas J. Walsh

the returns filed in the office of the commissioner of internal revenue.

PUBLICITY CLAUSE MAY BE KILLED

attention to his letter, which was put in The Congressional Record recently by Senator McLean, of Connecticut. Mr. Hull explained:

"The federal income tax act of 1904 in section 34, reenacted section 3167 of the revised statutes containing secrecy of returns and without special opposition, so far as I recall. In this connection, it is my recollection that when this act was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court the treasury directed that all income tax returns on file be burned."

Adopted Secrecy Plan.

"The federal corporation excise act of 1909 contained a provision that the returns filed in the office of the commissioner of internal revenue should constitute public records and be open to inspection as such. It was soon deemed wise in the interest of the more successful administration of the law to adopt secrecy, with the result that an appropriation bill which passed congress in June, 1910, among other things, provided that these corporation excise tax returns should be open to inspection only upon the order of the president under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury and approved by the president."

"The treasury later in the year issued a regulation, which the president approved, restricting the inspection of these returns virtually to certain officials of the government under certain conditions and to stockholders of a given corporation which had filed its returns."

Regulation Is General.

"This regulation also provided that when he was found hiding in a ditch near Lakewood by two passersby, and returned to his confinement.

Originally sentenced to die on April 25, he was granted four weeks more of life when Governor Walker ordered a reprieve to May 23.

Satterfield was represented by Attorney Murphy M. Holloway, who has fought the case through every phase.

atrocious murder as this record disclosed should not and will not be condoned by this administration. I, therefore, approve the recommendation of the prison commission and decline to interfere with the judgment of the court."

Claims New Evidence.

Stating that he still had hopes that his life will be saved, Satterfield said that new evidence in his case recently had been unearthed which, he believes, will entitle him to a new trial. He refused to divulge the nature of this evidence, however, but said it "would throw an entirely new light on the matter."

"I guess the governor did his duty as he saw it," he said.

"There has been a killing and killings are against the law. It took my attorney a long time to drill that fact into my head. I just couldn't see it that way. I have no criticism whatever to make of the governor or of the jury. I have not given up hope yet, and I will not. As long as there is life there is hope," he smiled.

PASSION PLAYERS SAIL FOR EUROPE

New York, May 15.—As frugal in their choice of steamer accommodations as they have been throughout their tour of the United States, three leading characters in the famous Oberammergau passion play have sailed back toward their little mountain village.

Although $200,000 was raised on their tour, expenses were so high that they were forced to travel second class. Offers to provide luxurious cabins came from many of their friends. "Charity?" exclaimed Anton Lang, the gentle Christ. "No, we are making our own way. We shall sail second class."

With Anton Lang and his wife were the gray-haired Peter of the play, Andreas Lang, and the red-bearded Judas, Guido Mayr.

Thirty-seven of the players came to America to sell products of their handicraft in order to raise funds to carry on the passion play.

"We have reserved enough money, over the great expense of the tour, to start the next play," said Lang. "That will be in 1930. But there is not enough to carry it on. Nor can we live in the meantime on what we have. But we have orders from your American people, who have been so kind to us, that will keep us busy, and we hope to get enough money to go on with the play."

Lang expressed amazement at the fact that New York wastes in a day what would feed Oberammergau for a year, he said.

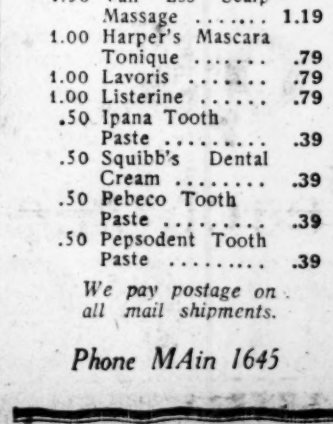

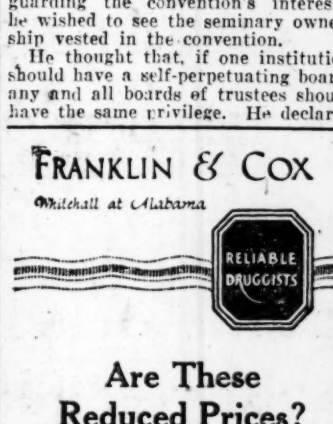

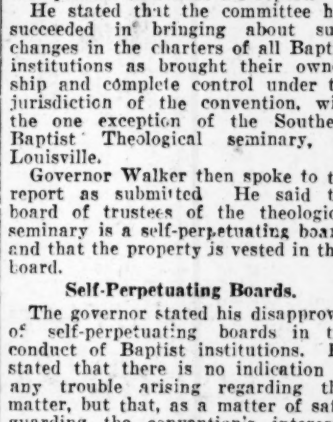

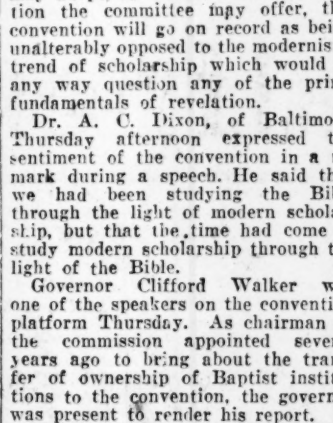

"What do you think of prohibition?" a reporter asked.

"Excuse me if I laugh," replied Lang. "I must now put on my million-dollar smile."

SOUTHERN CHIEFS OF BAPTIST WOMEN

the self-perpetuating board of trustees to be undemocratic.

The governor stated that he was concerned about the matter because of the experience of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, some few years ago when serious trouble arose in connection with a self-perpetuating board of trustees, resulting in the loss of Vanderbilt university.

Mullins in Agreement.

Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the theological seminary, stated to the convention that each and every member of the seminary board of trustees is in heartiest sympathy with all movements of the denomination, and is in perfect accord with the idea of the full ownership and control of the seminary by the convention. He stated, however, that owing to the way the charter of the institution is written, and to the fact that many bequest made the institution have peculiar stipulations as to how they shall be used and who shall have direction of them, a most complex situation arises in effecting any changes whatever.

The report of the committee, as submitted by Governor Walker, was accepted by the convention and referred to the proper committee of the convention.

During the session of Thursday the convention gave extended attention to the seminary of the body. During this time special needs of the theological seminary were considered, in which it was shown that the seminary had received only 5 per cent of the amount allotted to it in the asking of the 75-million campaign as adopted five years ago.

Seminary Asks Aid.

The seminary now comes to the convention asking for emergency relief, and help in its building program for the immediate future. The special appeal is that the sum of $1,000,000 of the amount allotted to that institution in the 75-million campaign be paid over to the seminary during the year 1925.

After several professors of the seminary and other friends and supporters of the institution had spoken, the convention heartily approved the appeal and adopted the report.

Two other Baptist institutions were accepted by the convention. The National Baptist Memorial

Memorial to religious liberty being erected by Baptists at Washington. The southern convention will consider the matter Saturday.

the national Baptist memorial that is in process of erection at Washington. Dr. B. C. Henning, of Atlanta, will represent the memorial before the convention.

The proposal for a national Baptist memorial at Washington was adopted five years ago, when it was determined to erect in the capital city a representative Baptist church, to cost about $400,000. The Northern Baptist convention, the Columbus Association of Baptist Churches, and the Southern Baptist convention entered into the project. During these years the work has been under way, until now it is approaching completion.

Located in one of the choice sections of the capital city, the memorial is a structure of beauty and impressiveness. Many foreign embassies are nearby, as well as numerous state public buildings.

The committee in charge of the memorial interest in this convention consists of Dr. B. D. Gray, Dr. B. C. Henning, Dr. W. L. Hall, Dr. T. C. Skinner and Dr. E. B. Jackson. There yet remains much work to be done before the imposing structure erected as a monument to religious liberty, as fostered by the Baptists, can be fully completed. It is proposed to interest the southern convention at this time to the extent that the remainder of funds promised will be forthcoming.

Central of Georgia Tells About Its Employees

Transportation is an essential industry that renders a great and necessary service to the country. Therefore, railroad men have a right to be proud of their calling. The public apparently has an increasing appreciation of what transportation means to the general welfare, but perhaps few people, even those who ship and travel continually, understand the care with which railroad employees are chosen. Any person who is employed by the Central of Georgia Railway must measure up to high standards physically, mentally and morally. The applicant must present a record of previous employment and references as to good character. He must undergo an examination to determine if he is in sound physical condition. His eyesight and his hearing are tested. Since life and property are entrusted to the care of those in train service, the physical examination in certain departments is even more exacting than that of the United States Army.

In addition to being fit physically and above the average in mental attainments, the railroad employee must observe high moral standards. For instance, it is well known that the rules of the Transportation Department prohibit the use of intoxicating liquor. All rules are impartially enforced by those charged with maintaining discipline, and many men are now in other employment because of infractions of the regulations that came to the attention of the alert supervisory forces. Not every man who enters railway service remains there. Those who do continue in our employ are picked men of a high type of manhood. They are expected to be courteous at all times, and they strive to give consideration to the rights, comfort and conveniences of the patrons of the road.

It means much to the public to have its transportation affairs handled by efficient, loyal and courteous employees. The people may ship their property from place to place with the assurance that it will receive correct and careful handling, and that the employee will endeavor to deliver it at destination in the same good condition that it left its point of origin. More than that, the traveler may entrust himself and the members of his family to the care of railway employees with entire confidence that everything humanly possible is being done to prevent even the slightest injury. The safety of passenger transportation on the Central of Georgia is indicated by the fact that nearly 4,000,000 passengers were carried last year without a single fatality.

The Central of Georgia is proud of the fine personnel of its employees. Its officers have been recruited from the ranks because of their qualifications for increased responsibility. They understand the conditions under which the men work and their success is an example of the opportunity that is open to the man who makes good in railroading. Our employees have contributed largely toward establishing the reputation of this railway as a dependable transportation utility. The management is glad of this opportunity to inform the public how its employees are selected and trained.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

L. A. DOWNS,
President, Central of Georgia Railway Company.

MEMPHIS SLATED FOR NEXT MEETING

to sign the statement. This last resolution does not stipulate that detail.

Papers in Committee.

Both the resolutions are now in committee, and are to be reported back either today or tomorrow. Whichever resolution the convention may adopt, or whatever recommendation the committee may offer, this convention will go on record as being unalterably opposed to the modernist trend of scholarship which would in any way question any of the prime fundamentals of revelation.

Dr. A. C. Dixon, of Baltimore, Thursday afternoon expressed the sentiment of the convention in a remark during a speech. He said that he had been studying the Bible through the light of modern scholarship, but that the time had come to study modern scholarship through the light of the Bible.

Governor Clifford Walker was one of the speakers on the convention platform Thursday. As chairman of the commission appointed several years ago to bring about the transfer of ownership of Baptist institutions to the convention, the governor was present to render his report.

He stated that the committee had succeeded in bringing about such changes in the charters of all Baptist institutions as brought their ownership and complete control under the jurisdiction of the convention, with the one exception of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, at Louisville.

Governor Walker then spoke to the report as submitted. He said the board of trustees of the theological seminary is a self-perpetuating board and that the property is vested in that board.

Self-Perpetuating Boards.

The governor stated his disapproval of self-perpetuating boards in the conduct of Baptist institutions. He stated that there is no indication of any trouble arising regarding this matter, but that, as a matter of safeguarding the convention's interests, he wished to see the seminary ownership vested in the convention.

He thought that, if one institution should have a self-perpetuating board, any and all boards of trustees should have the same privilege. He declared

NEW TRIALS ORDERED IN 2 MURDER CASES

In two murder cases, in which defendants had been found guilty with recommendation to mercy, and had received sentences of life imprisonment, the Georgia supreme court on Thursday reversed the action of the lower court, thus calling for new trials.

One was from Monroe county, where Cary Grier was convicted of murder. It was shown that he had shot at his wife and killed his child, held in his mother's arms at the time. The case was reversed because evidence of the wife was admitted as competent.

The other case was that of Lula Freeman, convicted in Bibb county for killing her husband, William F. Freeman, Jr. The defense testimony was that Freeman had threatened to kill her and he was shot while they were scuffling over a shotgun. The grounds for reversal of this case were that the judge had failed to instruct the jury on manslaughter, as well as murder.

HITCH DEVELOPS IN PLAN FOR SITE FOR ART MUSEUM

A hitch in plans to give 10 acres of Piedmont park to the Atlanta Art association for an art museum developed Thursday when Councilman John A. White, member of the park committee which approved the gift Monday, said he would ask reconsideration.

He said he thought the city should retain title to the land on which the museum is to be built and that the tract awarded, which is now used for polo and for maneuvers of the Governor's Horse guards, should be retained for its present use. The question is to be threshed out at another meeting of the park committee as soon as Chairman James L. Wells returns to the city.

DEPORTATION FACES FRITZ W. BISCHOFF

M. A. Coykendall, immigration inspector in charge of Atlanta district, announced Thursday that Fritz W. Bischoff, who was released Tuesday from the Atlanta federal penitentiary, where he was serving a twenty-five-year sentence for spreading alien propaganda and destroying government property during the world war, had sailed from New Orleans under guard for New York, from which port he will be deported to Germany this week.

Unofficially it is reported that Bischoff was released through an agreement with the German government and rumors from Washington indicate that his release was in exchange for Lieutenant Corlis Griffith, held in Germany for attempted kidnapping of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll.

SAY ZIHLMAN CHARGE IS NOT ESTABLISHED

Washington, May 15.—The house committee authorized to investigate the charge made before a Chicago grand jury that Representative Zihlman, republican, Maryland, accepted a bribe, reported today that "taken as a whole in the opinion of the committee the evidence does not establish truth of the charge."

Coincident with submission of the report to the house, Representative Langley, republican, Kentucky, who also was mentioned in the Chicago inquiry, and who was convicted several days ago of violating the prohibition law, notified Speaker Gillett that pending final action on his appeal he would abstain from attending house sessions or participating in proceedings of the house public buildings committee, of which he is chairman.

The committee in its report said such an arrangement was satisfactory, and suggested that no further action be taken with regard to Mr. Langley until his case has been disposed of by the courts. The committee report was unanimous.

Arkansas Judge Held in $43,000 County Shortage

Pangould, Ark., May 15.—Judge J. C. Honey, county judge, was under $1,000 bond today to answer a charge of accessory to perjury, made in a warrant issued after a Greene county grand jury reported to the criminal division of circuit court that county "scrip," with a value of approximately $43,000, had been removed from the office of a clerk without a proper receipt in the records from the persons who obtained it.

The grand jury report did not name the person directly responsible, but it was understood that other arrests would be made.

The warrant was said to have been based on alleged issuance of a piece of scrip for $1,000 to Hogan Oliver, of Little Rock, on a claim for services rendered in connection with the refunding of a scrip issue.

The $43,000 issue was said to be held by a bank in New York city.

The grand jury in its report contended the $43,000 issue was without due authority.

Judge Foley's refusal came as a stunning surprise to the hearing, the leaders throughout the city, who had been given to understand that he had accepted upon the insistence of Governor Smith.

The surrogate's declination was contained in a letter to the executive committee of Tammany Hall, which he said was written several days ago. Its issuance had been withheld until the earnest solicitation of Governor Smith, Mayor Hyman and National Committeeman Mack.

Ill health was given by the judge as his reason for declining the leadership. It is also understood that this wife, a daughter of Murphy, opposed his acceptance.

FOLEY ACCEPTS, THEN DECLINES TAMMANY MANTLE

New York, May 15.—Surrogate James A. Foley, who was authoritatively reported to have accepted the leadership of Tammany Hall, has now reversed his position and declines to take the mantle worn for more than a quarter of a century by Charles F. Murphy.

Judge Foley's refusal came as a stunning surprise to the hearing, the leaders throughout the city, who had been given to understand that he had accepted upon the insistence of Governor Smith.

THREE CUBANS FREED

Defense Motion To Quash U. S. Charge Uncontested.

Ocala, Fla., May 15.—Ray Garcia, J. Fernandez and Robert Martinez, Cubans, held on charges of violation of United States neutrality laws, were released by United States Commissioner Savage here late today when counsel for the government failed to contest a motion to quash charges against them. The motion was made by defense counsel on the grounds that the charges were not supported by adequate testimony.

Counsel for the Cuban vice-consul at Jacksonville attended the hearing, a stenographer and interpreter, to record the proceedings of the case. It is understood the Cuban government will attempt to obtain the re-arrest of the three men.

Sleuths Worried Over Jeremiah And His Stories

Suspected of highway robbery D. J. Jeremiah, 46, alias D. J. Rooney, who gave his address as Cascade avenue, is behind bars at police station.

He was arrested by Detectives J. C. Mosley and J. W. Woolley at Nassau and Spring streets Thursday night. Since his incarceration he has talked freely, although at times wildly, about a wide range of crimes he claims to have committed. Officers are inclined to believe at least a part of his story.

Officer Woolley stated that the prisoner fitted in many particulars descriptions furnished the police department of bandits figuring in recent holdups and an effort will be made to have him identified by the victims.

NEGRO SENTENCED TO HANG JUNE 20

Will Johnson, negro, whom a jury convicted of murdering Peter G. Poulos, restaurant keeper, at 11 South Pryor street, in November, 1922, was sentenced to hang June 20 by Judge J. D. Humphries Thursday. The new execution date was fixed following denial of a new trial by the supreme court.

The indictment charged Johnson and another negro, Chester Johnson, with entering Poulos' place to steal. Poulos was shot and killed as he was endeavoring to escape, after he had been tied by the negroes. Chester Johnson drew a life term upon a plea of guilty.

The architects, G. Lloyd Preacher & Co., advise that the plans for the project are so far advanced that work can be commenced in about thirty days. This will enable the building program to be carried out on schedule. The property of the company—nearly one square mile—is located directly in front of the great Confederate Memorial and is naturally adapted to the proposed development. Upon completion of plans as developed by E. S. Draper, landscape architect and engineer, it will be the last word in real estate development and will be one of the show places of the South.

At this year-round resort the thousands of tourists attracted to this point by the Confederate Memorial will find a welcome place where rest and out-in-the-open recreation can be had. Here the golfer, fisherman or equestrian may indulge in his favorite sport. That the company has wonderful possibilities for large earnings is evidenced by the manner in which the major financing was taken care of by eastern bankers after their investigation of the project. As this is a small offering, we suggest that those that wish to acquire some of the Common Stock act at once. WILLING TO BUY POWER AT SHOALS

Washington, May 15.—Willingness of the associated power companies to submit another Muscle Shoals proposal to purchase power produced at Muscle Shoals by the government and distribute it under the federal water-power act was expressed at today's senate agriculture committee's hearing by E. A. Yates, general manager of the Alabama Power company.

Yates explained this proposal would depend upon perpetual government ownership and operation and in effect would be a modification of the Norris bill which provides for government operation of the property.

"Do you see any reason why the government should not retain ownership of Muscle Shoals and sell the power?" Senator Kendrick, democrat, Wyoming, had asked the witness.

"No reason whatever," Yates replied.

"Better than to turn it over to a private corporation?"

"In some respects, yes."

"You say these southeastern power companies could handle it economically?"

"Yes sir, by hooking up Muscle Shoals plants with the other existing plants in the south."

Senator Heflin asked:

"You would rather handle it that

Chicago Thugs Adopt Bombs As Superior Mode of Terror

Chicago, May 15.—Every day is like an old-fashioned Fourth of July here since the criminal gentry discovered some two weeks ago that the tossing of dynamite bombs was in many ways superior to terrorism by the revolver and shotgun.

All the thrills of an earthquake, as well as the accompanying damage, have come into the lives of many Chicagoans.

Two bombings Thursday stirred the chief of police to the threat that he would organize a bomb squad of a dozen men, each one to be equipped with a seismograph.

The day's bombing program commenced when Gus Costello, intending to look in his mail box outside the front porch for his usual morning black hand letter, couldn't find the front porch, which had just been blown up.

A few hours later, an automobile whizzed by the grocery store of Joseph Melone and a bomb was hurled through the plate-glass window, making it impossible for even customers who had paid their bills to recognize the place.

One gunman was killed after a duel in which a detective was probably fatally wounded. Alexander Ostrowski, the gunman, was stopped by three detectives as he was "pulling" a police box.

When Ostrowski, quick on the draw, reached for his hip pocket, Barney Smith, one of the detectives, lunged forward in a necktie tackle. But Ostrowski had already started firing, and one of his bullets lodged in the shoulder of Detective James O'Brien.

In a sharp struggle Smith succeeded in holding the gunman's chest in such a position that it made a good target for Detective Carroll, who shot fast, and killed Ostrowski.

tour are planning to serve refreshments to the Constitution party and Blakely will play host to the first division Saturday night on the public square.

The return trip will start from Panama City Saturday, May 24, although anyone desiring to remain longer or start home before that time is at liberty to do so.

Fishing Is Fine

Atlanta anglers who have recently returned from St. Andrew's bay section report the fishing there exceptionally good and the local tourists are looking forward to some fine sport. The king mackerel or kingfish is now running along the gulf coast and biting freely. This graceful and toothsome beauty of the ocean is a surface feeder and can be seen leaping from the water as he chases the neobaut and smaller fish on which he preys. He is caught by trolling and puts up a game struggle before he can be brought to boat.

But the kingfish is but one of many varieties of salt water game which attract fishermen from all sections to St. Andrew's bay. Although this is not the best season for tarpon it is not at all unlikely that one may grab at a kingfish troll. Then there is the snapper fishing out on the banks in the gulf and the huge lanes, something like a cod fish, which often tip the scales at 50 pounds. Sea trout, sheepshead, sea bass, striped bass and flounders are other varieties for game anglers.

For those who prefer fresh water fishing there are the inland streams within easy access of Panama City. These the gamey black bass abound, eager to match skill with the bait casters and the flyrod artists. Bream, jack and perch are also to be found in abundance.

The Women's club, of Panama City, has opened its clubhouse for the week to the women members of the Constitution party and has appointed a committee to see to it that their visit is a pleasant one. Many of the special entertainments planned will be a special appeal to the feminine contingent of the tour.

While it is expected that a majority of the Atlanta visitors will take advantage of the program drawn up by the certain gamey black bass will not be the slightest obligation incurred in the matter and any one who prefers to spend his time fishing alone or with a small party of friends may do so without hesitation.

Hydroplanes from the naval air station at Pensacola are expected at Panama City next week as a special attraction for the Georgia visitors. It was announced yesterday in a telegram from Alfred Tyler, chairman of the Panama City committee on entertainment.

Mr. Tyler also says that a number of committees are working enthusiastically on plans to give the Constitution party the best time of their lives.

Illustrative of the pep of the Panama City people is the announcement that a $400,000 hotel is soon to be built there, the necessary amount having already been subscribed. An 18-hole golf links will also be laid out in the near future.

A. M. E. CHURCH ELECTS BRYANT FOR 2D TERM

Louisville, Ky., May 15.—(Special.)—Dr. Ira Bryant was re-elected secretary and treasurer of the Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. church at sessions here today in the face of organized opposition of many bishops and general officers of the church.

A split between the northern and southern churches was at one time feared by leaders because of certain criticisms said to have been made by Dr. Bryant of the efficiency with which some leaders were conducting their work.

A telegram received from President Calvin Coolidge, sending greetings to the session of the general conference, was read. He paid a tribute to the work which is being done, and said, "The A. M. E. church is doing a great work among the colored people of the United States in developing loyalty to the nation."

The message continued to say that the colored race is an active part of the government.

The continuation of the election of general officers consumed the entire day. Rev. J. C. Robinson, of Detroit, was elected editor of the A. M. E. Review.

Rev. John Harmon, of Atlanta, is the leading candidate for editorship of the Southern Christian Recorder.

Rev. R. R. Holmes, president of Holmes institute, of Atlanta, and a delegation of ministers of the general conference, will leave on a special train Saturday for St. Louis. Rev. Holmes will deliver these addresses in the churches of St. Louis Sunday, discussing the religious, educational and economic condition of the colored people in the south as compared with those of the north.

OLIVER KROEGER KILLED BY GUN

supper there Thursday. Mrs. Kroeger went to Cohen's house shortly after 4 o'clock, Kroeger stating that he intended to follow as soon as he had cleaned the rifle. Mrs. Kroeger begged him not to bother with the gun, but he laughingly reassured her, and it is thought that he set about the task of cleaning the gun as soon as she left.

The rifle is of small caliber, and the exploding cartridge made little sound, so the first intimation of anything wrong came when young Cohen discovered the body.

Lived Here Many Years.

Kroeger was well known in Atlanta, and had lived here for many years. His jovial nature made him especially popular with his brother firemen.

In addition to his widow, he is survived by a brother-in-law, a nephew, Samuel Cohen, and a niece, who lives in St. Louis.

The body was removed to the undertaking establishment of Greenberg & Bond, and the inquest will be held there this morning. Funeral arrangements to be announced later.

and Mrs. McCullough attended a party at the home of Homer Prater, 800 Piedmont avenue, during the evening, and Mr. McCullough suffered an attack of acute indigestion. He was treated by Dr. J. N. Brawner, also a guest at the party and, apparently relieved, left for home shortly afterwards.

However, after arriving home, Mrs. McCullough stated, his condition grew worse, and he was unable to sleep. Mrs. McCullough said she did not fall asleep until about 3 o'clock Thursday morning, and was awakened half an hour later by the sound of a shot. Finding her husband's bed deserted, she searched the house, locating his body in the basement, a smoking revolver lying near.

Mr. McCullough, who was 40 years old, had resided in Atlanta practically all his life. He was a member of the firm of Poole & McCullough, automobile dealers, for many years, but recently established a business alone.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, Haslett, Robert, Claude and Wil-

THE BORAH POLICIES.

Senator William E. Borah, republican, of Idaho, in a discussion of foreign and domestic issues in Thursday's Constitution, very forcibly argues for tax reduction legislation and equally as forcibly against the recently passed so-called soldier bonus legislation, which the president very correctly vetoed on Thursday.

He does not enter into any partisan differentiation between the tax reduction plan proposed by the secretary of the treasury and that subsequently proposed by the democrats in the house and senate, and which had the support of the insurgent republican wings of both branches.

Senator Borah is a progressive of the ultra-type and was one of the irreconcilables in the famous treaty fight of '19 and '20, but he has never been classed with the purely radical element, headed by La Follette, Shipstead, Brookhart and others of the farm-labor, or non-partisan parties. He is an able lawyer, usually constructive, a most effective debater and a thinker along national and international lines who is guided by his own judgment and respectful of any attempted dictation on the part of others. He is a party unto himself.

He has not joined the radical insurgents, therefore, in their alliances with the democrats, and in most of the pending economic issues his mind runs along the same channel as that of President Coolidge. This is true not only as to taxation, but as to the misnamed "bonus" measure.

In The Constitution article he says:

"One has a right to be for tax reduction, or one has a right to be for bonus for soldiers, but you cannot be for both. You cannot take off a temporary burden of $140,000,000 or so, and lay on a permanent burden of obligation of $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000, and call it tax reduction."

"There is little hope of success for any issue, no matter how vital, except through the irresistible power of public opinion."

"I am against the so-called bonus. It is the greatest obstacle to tax reduction. It is now five years since the end of the war. The returned soldiers have taken up their several vocations and callings and are affected by the conditions in the country the same as other citizens. They cannot succeed when business, industry and agriculture are embarrassed or discouraged. The pittance granted to them in the sum-total of their well-being or their success, but everything and anything which contributes to the rehabilitation and revival of economic and business conditions throughout the country will mean success to the soldier far beyond anything which individual aid would mean."

"The world is sick and only reduction in burdens and expenditures—a return to the county of nations—peace with your fellow human beings—only these things will make the world well again."

His judgment against the bonus measure is unanswerable. It provides no practical relief for the well and conditioned ex-service man as an individual, but it conversely imposes upon him a tax that will in the end far more than offset the "compensation" adjusted to his individual case, and that will be transferred as time passes to his children and grandchildren. It throws a burden upon an over-taxed people against which the temporary $140,000,000 tax reduction will pale into insignificance.

Senator Borah draws the comparison well and shows that the

"bonus" legislation can only mean a more distressed economic condition for those who come under its provisions.

That the government is providing generously and without stint, in monthly cash compensations, hospitalizations, vocational schooling, etc., for the disabled veterans of the world war is most commendable and nothing in reason should be left undone in this respect.

But the so-called bonus bill has been taken up as a political expediency act entirely, and it has been the center of more congressional demagoguing than any issue before the American congress in years.

Senator Borah has softened considerably in his view of international affairs. "The world is sick," he says, "and only reduction in burdens and expenditures—a return to the county of nations—peace with your fellow human beings—only these things will make the world well again."

This is true, and had the senator accepted, practiced and vigorously counseled that same view in '19 and '20 the economic conditions of the world would have been different today and the depressed condition of farmers, to which he feigningly and truthfully refers, would not have stood as a great barrier to domestic happiness and tranquility.

He argues this in asking for the recognition of Russia, basing his argument purely upon the economic ground of international trade. Russia's government does not assimilate with American ideals and a recognition of the soviet is an endorsement of communism with which all of Europe is now threatened, as witnessed by recent elections. Had we performed our duty toward Europe in 1919—finishing the job into which we entered—Russia today would have been a democracy and the very ends now sought by the Idaho senator would have long since been accomplished.

However, it is easy to see the changed trend of Senator Borah's mind and it is possible to see him one of the most enthusiastic supporters of a more liberal international policy before the approaching campaign is over.

THE PRESIDENT'S VETOES.

President Coolidge's veto Thursday of the makeshift soldier bonus bill, and a prospective veto of the equally makeshift tax reduction bill, indicate that he is willing, and perhaps anxious, to submit these great domestic economic issues to a solemn referendum with the American people, and to stake his own chances for election to the presidency upon the verdict of popular will.

In this he is demonstrating a political firmness that people admire, and it accentuates his own plea that issues of this kind should be divorced from political juggling, and settled in the best interest of the people, without regard to party or bloc lines.

This is the position The Constitution has always and unreservedly taken.

Congress has fooled away its time for several months playing political football with these two great economic issues, the whole sparring being placed upon no higher ground than that of political expediences, or political advantages, for the 1924 national campaign.

This is a party government, and should so remain, but it is rapidly drifting today into a minority or a bloc government, as the troubles of the past few months in congress have been caused largely by bloc alliances, but the results from these troubles fall directly back upon the people.

Tax reduction, even as provided in the makeshift bill that has been agreed upon, is too important to the material welfare of the people to have it vetoed.

The Constitution has hoped that the president would approve the measure put through by the democratic-insurgent coalition and seek to improve the measure by subsequent amendments.

At any rate if he vetoes the bill and carries it to the people in a November referendum, it is hoped he will insist upon, and arrange in conjunction, if possible, for the immediate passage of a flat 25 per cent reduction measure, applying to the 1923 assessments.

For his veto of the so-called bonus bill he need have no fear of popular will.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

MUSTARD VERSUS BUNK.

A home-made mustard paste will accomplish all that any external application can accomplish for any internal trouble. That's flat, and it will save some folks some money—not to mention health or time.

Bronchitis, pneumonia, pleurisy and other acute inflammations in the chest may be cured by mustard, or a "threat" of any such trouble, whatever that may be, may turn to a false alarm under the persuasion of a mustard paste of the right quality and character. A mustard paste has character, all right. It should be insistent but kind, and not vindictive. Some nurses make mustard pastes that are also bitter to the taste, and which are not worth while, and others concoct mustard pastes which warrant very strong language. A timid, vacillating mustard paste is commonly blamed on the mustard, while the real cause is determined to mutilate generally draws suspicions on the lard or white of egg. Mustard paste does vary in biting or burning capacity, but as for the addition of white or lard or any other ingredient which purports to prevent the paste from blistering, that's a variety of bunk which may be all right for simple folk. There is no excuse whatever for blistering anybody with a mustard paste and no nurse who has any kind of training will ever permit such a thing to happen. Mustard should not be applied to a child's chest—use camphorated oil instead.

To make a mustard paste mix one part of mustard flour with four parts of wheat flour and enough cold water to make a smooth paste that will not flow. Spread the paste on heavy paper about one eighth of an inch thick over the part to be treated. Take a nap at the skin under it. Every five minutes, when the skin gets more red, red the paste has done all the good it is going to do and deserves to be taken off right away. A few minutes too long may blister the patient and blast the reputation of the nurse.

Mustard has two other important uses which warrant a place for it in the medicine cupboard. It is useful in giving a hot mustard foot bath, which, in my old-fashioned judgment, is about the best remedy there is for home treatment of acute respiratory ailments of any kind. But I am not going to try to describe it here, because whenever I do the nurse stands up and says "that's not the way to do it" and take great pleasure in pointing out the glaring defects of my method.

The third use of mustard is as an emergency emetic, though it is slow as compared with the copper sulphate already described. A tablespoonful in a glass of lukewarm water turns the trick.

Text of President's Veto Message

Washington, May 15.—The text of President Coolidge's message vetoing the bill for the relief of the veterans of the world war, and for other purposes, is as follows:

"To the House of Representatives: 'Herewith is returned, without approval, H. R. 7950, a bill to provide compensation for veterans of the world war, and for other purposes.'"

"The bill provides a bonus for the veterans of the world war and dependents of those who fell. To certain of its beneficiaries whose maximum benefit does not exceed $50, this bonus is to be paid immediately in cash. To each of its beneficiaries who are not to receive such immediate cash payment, there is to be provided free insurance under a twenty-year endowment plan. The face value of each policy will be based upon the military service, the average amount being at least $982, payable at the expiration of twenty years or at death prior thereto. After the lapse of two years the holder of a policy may borrow therefrom from banks at reasonable rates of interest. If amounts so borrowed are not repaid by the veteran the government is obligated to pay to the banks the indebtedness which ultimately reduces the maturity value of the policy."

Need $155,500,000 First Year.

"An appropriation of $146,000,000 for the fiscal year 1925 will be required to provide the prorated annual cost of the insurance at the most cash payments to those not receiving such insurance. This does not include administrative costs, which will amount the congress that such insurance was to relieve the government of subsequent contributions. The then secretary of the treasury said in relation to the proposed insurance act: 'It ought to check any further attempts at service pension legislation by enabling a man now to provide against impairment through old age, total disability or death resulting from other causes, and to give all this protection to those kindred who may be dependent upon him and who do not share in the government compensation.' This opportunity was afforded all those who entered the service. It was distinctly understood that the government would not be obliged to pay the cost of the insurance. The intent of this bill now to provide free insurance lacks both a legal or moral requirement, and falls into the position of a plain gratuity.

"Considering this bill from the standpoint of its intrinsic merit, I see no justification for its enactment into law. We owe no bonus to able-bodied veterans of the world war. The first duty of every citizen is to the nation. The veterans of the world war are not to be considered as a class, but as individuals. To confer upon them a cash consideration or its equivalent for performing this first duty is unjustified. It is not justified when considered in the interest of the whole people; it is not justified when considered along on its own merits.

"No Value on Gratitude.

"The gratitude of the nation to these veterans cannot be expressed in dollars and cents. No war exists by which we can either equalize the burdens or give adequate financial reward to those who served the nation in both civil and military capacities. To sell to the nation a piece of land or of their country will rightfully be theirs forevermore. But patriotism can neither be bought nor sold. It is not a material thing, it is a spiritual thing, but spiritual. It is one of the finest and highest of human virtues. To attempt to pay money for it is to offer it an unworthy indignity which cheapens, debases and destroys it. Those who would really honor patriotism should strive to match it with an equal courage, with an equal fidelity to the welfare of their country, and an equal faith in the cause of righteousness.

"I am not unmindful that this bill also embraces within its provisions the disabled of our veterans and the dependents of those who fell. To state that the disabled veterans and these dependents are entitled to this additional gratuity is to state that the nation is not meeting its obligation to them. Such a statement cannot truthfully be made. The nation has spent more than two billion dollars in behalf of disabled veterans and dependents of those who died. It is now spending for compensation, training, insurance and hospitalization, more than $400,000,000 annually. Solitude for the disabled veterans and the dependents of those who lost their lives is the nation's solicitude. To their children, to their wives, to their families, a sacred obligation which will be generously and gratefully met. The nation stands ready to expend any amount needed for their proper care. But that is not the object of this bill.

"America entered the world war with a higher purpose than to secure material gain. Not greed, but duty was the impelling motive. Our veterans as a whole responded to that motive. They are not asking as a whole, they do not want as a whole, any money recompense. Those who seek a money recompense, for the most part of course, prefer an immediate cash payment. We must either abandon our theory of patriotism or abandon this bill. Patriotism which is bought and paid for is not patriotism. Our country has maintained the principle that our government is established for something higher and finer than to permit those who are charged with the responsibility of office, or any class whose favor they might seek, to get what they can out of it. Service to our country in time of war means sacrifice. It is for that reason alone that we honor and revere it. To attempt to make a money payment out of the earnings of the people to those who are physically weak and financially able is to abandon one of our most cherished American ideals. The property of the people belongs to the people. To take it from them by taxation cannot be justified except by urgent public necessity. Unless this principle be recognized our country is no longer secure, our people no longer free. This bill would condemn those who are weak to turn over a part of their earnings to those who are strong. Our country cannot afford it. The veterans as a whole do not want it. All our American principles are opposed to it. There is no moral justification for it.

position. He went into the usual arguments that a bonus would saddle the nation with heavy additional expense at this time and would commit it irrevocably to additional annual appropriations of $114,000,000 over a 20-year period. But these economy arguments represent only a temporary phase of the question to Coolidge. Many opponents of the bonus have said they favored it in principle, and that the only reason they oppose it now is because the government cannot afford it.

Comes Out In Open.

But the president hid behind no such plea of national poverty. His frank denunciation of the principle of a bonus made a deep impression even on those who disagree with him.

The veto message reached the house early in the afternoon. There was great commotion when the news reached the capitol and members scurried in to hear the message read. A vote was postponed until Saturday. The house promptly will override the veto. In the senate, the lineup is so close as to make any forecast doubtful. Whether the bonus survives the veto depends upon the effectiveness of Coolidge's argument in the senate.

Analyzing the financial aspects of the bill first, the president said the total cost over the 20-year period would be $2,280,000,000 at the lowest estimate.

In 1945, when the insurance policies would mature, the government would owe $2,500,000,000 in cash, which would have to be raised by a public sale of bonds—a major operation in finance which would be disastrous at that time and which would reduce the value of federal securities then outstanding.

Continue High Taxes.

To grant a bonus now would continue high taxes and the high cost of living, the president argued. Veterans would be better off to pay the $40 a year, which the insurance contingency would cost them, and be relieved of the high taxes and high cost of living which the bill would cause, he added.

He made an emphatic appeal for tax reduction, insisting that it is the one thing the country demands, irrespective of party.

Then taking up the principle of the bonus, the president said: "Considering this bill from the standpoint of its intrinsic merit, I see no justification for its enactment into law. We owe no bonus to able-bodied veterans of the world war. The first duty of every citizen is to the nation. The veterans of the world

Baptist Convention Sidelights

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

At the opening hour of the Southern Baptist convention Wednesday morning registration clerks announced the presence of 4,245 delegates, with others registering every moment. During the remainder of the first day at least another thousand came in, while late arrivals did not get to register until the beginning of the second day. The attendance at this convention will reach some 6,000 it is believed.

New President Popular.

Dr. George W. McDaniel, elected president of the convention by a large majority on the first ballot Wednesday morning, has already proven himself a master of assemblies, and has won the hearts of all convention delegates. Several times on Wednesday he was called upon to make quick and difficult decisions in parliamentary procedure, and each time his decisions met popular approval. He put the body on its feet early in his administration that no time would be lost. When the convention body sought to endorse some resolutions, Dr. McDaniel calmly remarked, 'The convention will save war performed this first duty. To confer upon them a cash consideration or its equivalent for performing this first duty is unjustified. It is not justified when considered in the interest of the whole people; it is not justified when considered alone on its own merits. He went into the usual arguments that a bonus would saddle the nation with heavy additional expense at this time and would commit it irrevocably to additional annual appropriations of $114,000,000 over a 20-year period. But these economy arguments represent only a temporary phase of the question to Coolidge. Many opponents of the bonus have said they favored it in principle, and that the only reason they oppose it now is because the government cannot afford it.

Comes Out In Open.

But the president hid behind no such plea of national poverty. His frank denunciation of the principle of a bonus made a deep impression even on those who disagree with him.

The veto message reached the house early in the afternoon. There was great commotion when the news reached the capitol and members scurried in to hear the message read. A vote was postponed until Saturday. The house promptly will override the veto. In the senate, the lineup is so close as to make any forecast doubtful. Whether the bonus survives the veto depends upon the effectiveness of Coolidge's argument in the senate.

Analyzing the financial aspects of the bill first, the president said the total cost over the 20-year period would be $2,280,000,000 at the lowest estimate.

In 1945, when the insurance policies would mature, the government would owe $2,500,000,000 in cash, which would have to be raised by a public sale of bonds—a major operation in finance which would be disastrous at that time and which would reduce the value of federal securities then outstanding.

Continue High Taxes.

To grant a bonus now would continue high taxes and the high cost of living, the president argued. Veterans would be better off to pay the $40 a year, which the insurance contingency would cost them, and be relieved of the high taxes and high cost of living which the bill would cause, he added.

He made an emphatic appeal for tax reduction, insisting that it is the one thing the country demands, irrespective of party.

Then taking up the principle of the bonus, the president said: "Considering this bill from the standpoint of its intrinsic merit, I see no justification for its enactment into law. We owe no bonus to able-bodied veterans of the world war. The first duty of every citizen is to the nation. The veterans of the world time if they give heed to the sound of the gavel."

If the auditorium could speak and tell of its observations during the numerous occasions it has housed multitudes, wonderful stories might be related. Last week it gave shelter to a circus, while shortly before that the gala week of grand opera was observed. Then an auto show, or a commercial exposition occupied the building. Next week, immediately after the adjournment of the Baptist convention, the building will be used to stage a boxing match. A psychological study is offered as one ponder the cumulative values to the world of the various assemblies held there.

Cordial Welcome.

Atlanta people have left nothing undone to impress upon the thousands of visitors the fact that the city accords them a gracious welcome. With all sorts of committees to arrange for the comfort and convenience of visitors, automobiles at command constantly, and hundreds of homes opened to the great host of church people, the Atlanta folks are endeavoring to make the convention members realize the heartiness and sincerity of the city's delight in having the convention held here. Indeed, Atlanta is the ideal convention city. The city's people are asking for the convention for 1925.

Choice for President.

Dr. A. A. Murphree, president of the convention, who was elected on the first ballot Wednesday morning, has the pleasure of knowing that Hon. William Jennings Bryan has approved him as suitable for the high position as the nation's chief executive. Mr. Bryan recently stated that Dr. Murphree is his choice for the presidency.

Jazz to Pulpit.

A thrilling speech was made before the convention body Wednesday afternoon, when Rev. Marvin Pharr, student of Mercer university, told of his labors and appealed for the success of the 75-million campaign. Mr. Pharr stated that five years ago he was leader of a jazz orchestra in Atlanta; but on the night the great 75-million campaign was launched he happened to be present and heard the addresses. He was deeply impressed with the fact that life contains greater realities and values than can be found in a jazz orchestra, and was moved from that hour to consider devoting his life to something really worthy while. As a result he later was converted, entered Mercer university, accepted the call to preach, and now is devoting his life to proclaiming the riches of the gospel to spirit-depraved mankind.

Raps Modernism.

During discussion of the education report, Dr. A. C. Dixon, of Baltimore, thrilled the audience in a short speech in which he severely rapped the theorizing of modern intellectuals. "The Bible says man came down from God through the garden," said Dr. Dixon, "but present teachings tell us that man came up from the beast through the jungle. Sin, therefore, is embryonic goodness, while virtue is an accident."

Related to Governor.

Dr. L. D. Dawson, of Tuscaloosa, in a speech before the convention Thursday stated that he did not know himself to be related to Governor Walker until Wednesday night. Dr. Dawson states that he was walking along the streets of the city that night, when a policeman yelled at him and ordered him to be "J. A. Walker." Just a moment before Dr. Dawson made the remark, Governor Walker had been on the convention platform. The sidelight reporter overheard another policeman the same night set ting a right a group of delegate visitors who had undertaken to make a left turn at "Five Points." "These church people come to Atlanta," said the traffic cop, "and try to break the laws just like Atlanta folks."

Music Greatest Ever.

The music of the convention is a great inspiration to those who hear it. A veteran Atlanta newspaper reporter, who has been hearing music at great gatherings all his life, stated that the convention music is beyond all odds the finest he has ever heard in this city.

Finds Odd Situation.

Governor Clifford Walker stated to the convention Thursday that in his investigations in all the states occupied by the Southern Baptist denomination he did not find one law book or statute book that had in it one line of recognition of the Southern Baptist convention as a corporate body.

ended for time and eternity on November 11, 1918."

Secretary Wilbur said that the great war had demonstrated the necessity of a merchant marine as a measure of national security.

ONE BANDIT ROBS EXPRESS OFFICES

Gainesville, Fla., May 15.—A lone bandit today entered the office of the American Railway Express company at High Springs, near here, and escaped with the payroll intended for the Atlantic Coast Line shippers, estimated at between $16,000 and $20,000. J. T. Pendleton, company agent, said the bandit drove away in a small touring car.

SECRETARY HUGHES RAPS LAX JURIES

property in this country are also getting too loose.

Compares Records.

The secretary instanced a report of a special committee of the American Bar association, in which it was shown that but 17 murders occurred in London in 1922 and that each crime was solved.

Hughes compared the 63 murders committed in England and Wales in 1921 and 200 murders in New York and 137 in Chicago during the same period.

Comparing 4,000 robberies reported in New York and Chicago in a single year to the 95 reported in England and Wales and the 122 in France during a like period, Hughes said the difficulty lay with governmental machinery.

More Speed Needed.

"We have good reason to congratulate ourselves," he said, "on the probability and impetuosity of our judicial administration."

But immediate prosecution, conviction and punishment where evidence warranted is what is needed, Hughes added.

"It is time also," he continued, "that we give serious thought to the question whether the privilege against self-incrimination should be maintained."

Such a privilege, he said, is not guaranteed by the constitution or its amendments, according to judicial interpretation.

The standards of political integrity are well maintained," Hughes said.

success crowning their efforts. As compared to Thursday's total of new cases, 150 cases were docketed Wednesday and 122 the day previous.

Proceedings in the recorder's court also served as a barometer of the decrease of violations and showed a great slash in the number of erring motorists, only 48 were arraigned before the bench. Forty of these paid fines aggregating $402. This amount compares with $1,181 paid by 74 defendants Wednesday.

Twenty-seven motorists were tried on blanket charges of violating the traffic ordinances and assessed fines ranging from $2 to $20. Nine were convicted of speeding and paid average fines of $25. Four reckless drivers were fined an average of $25 each.

Although violations seem on the wane, no relaxation will be forthcoming.

As the car occupied by Cox and White approached, the officers halted it, intending to reprimand the men for not using dimmers on their headlights. The car shot away, knocking Belsil to the ground, but Higgins clung to the running board and brought the machine to a stop.

DEALERS IN FURS AND COAL FAVORED BY WEATHER GODS

Continuance of the cool weather which has made Atlanta feel like a close relative to the north pole for the past week or so is predicted by C. F. von Herrmann, official forecaster for this territory. There is no likelihood of rain today, however, and a "fair and cool" forecast is sent out for the end of the week.

May, so far, has been marked by extreme coldness, the total deficiency in temperature for the month, from May 8 to 14 inclusive, being 74 degrees short of the normal. This, however, is not much colder than the same period last year, which also fell far below the normal, the deficiency for the same period in 1923 being 54 degrees.

The rainfall so far for May has been light, the total up to Wednesday night being only .48-100 of an inch for the month. The rainfall for the first half of the month in 1923 was 5.02 inches. Normal precipitation for the entire month is 3.00 inches.

Last May, like this one, was very cold, the low temperature periods being particularly marked between the 8th and 20th, and the 24th and 31st of the month.

PLAN OFFICIAL ORGAN

Educators Indorse "School, Home and Community."

"School, Home and Community," a publication edited by Burr Blackburn, will be recommended to the directors as official organ for the Georgia Educational association, it was voted by a subcommittee of the board Thursday afternoon. Dr. Willis A. Sutton, president; Kyle P. Alfriend, executive secretary; Miss Jessie Muse and W. E. Dendy, directors, voted the recommendation. The plan is to require a minimum of four pages of the publication for monthly reports of work of the Georgia Educational association instead of publishing its activities in an annual year book.

RESPIRE GIVEN BRYANT

Farmer Had Been Sentenced To Be Hanged Today.

A 30-day respite was granted Thursday by Governor Clifford Walker on behalf of Ira Bryant, farmer, convicted of the murder of James Lewis, a neighbor, in Grady county and sentenced to be hanged today. The state prison commission recommended that the death sentence imposed upon Bryant be commuted to one of life imprisonment. Testimony at the trial showed that Lewis died as the result of a beating administered by Bryant with a stick of stove-wood while both were drinking heavily in Bryant's home.

When Run-down or Recovering From a Prostrating Illness, Here's Good Advice

Atlanta, Ga.—During a time of the flu epidemic, in a mining town in Tennessee, I found it necessary to close my store, that I might act as nurse. There were a great many cases there at that time. We found Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to be the best tonic for convalescent patients. They all gained strength rapidly on this treatment. "My own case was no exception. The 'Golden Medical Discovery' gave tone to the digestive organs and enriched the blood, with the result of restoring me to a general healthy condition."—J. M. Kitchersid, 154 Whitehall St. Obtain the Discovery in tablets or liquid at your nearest drug store or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package or write for free medical advice.—(adv.)

Girl Scouts Demonstrate Ability as Homemakers

Miss Annett Barry, attractive Girl Scout, of Troop 2, Decatur, entertaining Tommy Baker and Julius Lively, according to Girl Scout methods demonstrated in the nursery at the Better Home, 212 Virginia avenue.

Proving their ability in many lines, the Girl Scouts are putting on a demonstration every afternoon at 212 Virginia avenue, one of the better homes models.

In every room of the home two little girls are at work every afternoon of the week, demonstrating their ability as homemakers in kitchen, nursery, bedroom, living room and dining room.

On Tuesday afternoon certain members of Troop 2, Decatur, were on duty. Annett Barry, pictured above, and several of the girls in the same troop entertained the two little boys in the nursery with games and stories. Both children are regular fellows, as full of noise and mischief as the average five-year-old kiddie. Annett

Miss Hitchcock Weds Mr. Poole Wednesday Evening

A marriage of interest throughout the south, characterized by beautiful simplicity, was that of Miss Sara Jayne Hitchcock and Cason Poole, which was solemnized Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Mathew Hitchcock.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. G. Shankle in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The entire lower floor was decorated with an artistic display of cut flowers, the color motif of pink and white being used. The improvised altar was banked high with palms and ferns. Tall white pedestals held baskets of Easter lilies, alternating with candelabra holding burning tapers, which shed a soft glow over the bridal party.

Preceding the entrance of the bride party Paul Sutton sang "At Dawning." To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Reulah Shirley, the maid of honor, Miss Ruth Stone, entered alone wearing a gown of powder blue chiffon heavily beaded with crystals and iridescent. Her hat was a French model of blue trimmed with pastel shaded fruit and flowers. Her bouquet was of pink roses showered with valley lilies.

The bride and groom entered together. The bride was lovely in a smart three-piece suit of dark blue charmeuse, fashioned with long coat and worn with a blouse of white flat crepe beautifully embroidered in Chinese design. Her hat, a becoming model of black Milan, was trimmed with burnt peacock and rhinestone ornament. Her corsage bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Assisting in entertaining were the bride's sisters, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Robert Flournoy and Mrs. Charles Childs. Miss Jeffrey Bright and Mrs. William Oliver served punch.

Mrs. William Litchcock, the bride's mother, wore a handsome gown of blue georgette crepe heavily beaded. Her corsage was of lavender sweet peas and valley lilies.

Mr. Poole and his bride left during the evening for Florida, and after June 1 will be home at 20 Drewry circle.

Mrs. Archibald Davis Elected To National Board of Y.W.C.A.

The election of Mrs. Archibald H. Davis to the national board of the Young Women's Christian association is one of the interesting reports that is being brought back to Atlanta by the local Y. W. C. A. delegates who attended the national convention of the association that was held in New York from April 30 to May 6. Mrs. Davis was elected to the national board by popular ballot for a term of six years, this convention being the first time that the national body had held the popular ballot method of electing its personnel.

Being a member of the national board Mrs. Davis was eligible to attend as a visiting delegate the meeting of the world Y. W. C. A. that following the convention, was held in Washington, D. C., where only members of national boards or national staffs could attend.

As a delegate of the local Y. W. C. A. to the national convention, Mrs. Davis was prominent as a speaker on the program, it is said. She spoke to the 2,000 delegates on the change in the basis of membership in the Y. W. C. A. that was one of the vital problems of the convention. Besides her national membership committee work, Mrs. Davis is vice chairman of the endorsement fund committee of the national board.

What the national board does, in brief, is to give service to local associations, suggestions for policies, principles and programs and advice upon plans for organization and administration in city, town, country and student centers. It demonstrates how methods of work may be adapted to these different groups, centering attention upon health, recreation, education, economic and religious problems for younger girls, colored girls and foreign-born girls. It studies the work of other agencies, conducts research, collects statistics and methodizes this material, making it available through correspondence or personal visits. It furnishes this service to the United States and in foreign countries.

The national board also develops leadership through its training school, extension courses, summer conferences, student work and a volunteer workers' bureau. Where work is of national significance and outside the scope of local activities, the national board not only initiates, but also directly administers definite programs.

The advisory service of the national board is always determined by national or local needs—housing, rooms, registry, cafeterias, vocational and employment work, health and recreation.

The foreign work of the national body is explained in the program of the world Y. W. C. A. in Washington, D. C., when 22 members of the Y. W. C. A. in 22 nations answered the roll call. The members were real members and were not sent as delegates to the Washington world-wide Y. W. C. A. meeting. Each member had served the association of her respective country as a member for two years before she was sent to the world-wide meeting. The associations of China, Japan, Korea, the European countries including Estonia, Czechoslovakia, from South America, Egypt, Palestine, Austria, New Zealand, South Africa, South America, Mexico and other nations had their Y. W. C. A. members present.

Mrs. Davis as a member of the national board will be in official contact with the Y. W. C. A. of this country and those many lands, it is said.

Party With Eats Given Thursday At White House

By MARTHA STRAYER. Written for United News.

Washington, May 15.—The President and Mrs. Coolidge gave their first big white house garden party with "eats" Thursday.

A week of rain and a cabinet funeral failed to postpone the first outdoor affair of the white house spring social program. The Coolidges defied the jinx which has followed them through their opening season in the executive mansion, and entertained more than 2,000 people at the first of four garden parties for which they have issued invitations.

There are no refreshments at the big white house winter receptions, but this afternoon busy servants served mountains of sandwiches and gallons of ice cream to the guests who came in their best clothes and then had to keep on coats and wraps because of the chilly breeze.

Summer, winter and spring were represented in the clothes worn. There were winter coats and sleeveless white dresses. There were chiffon wraps, ostrich trimmed, and fur capes. Cautious women guests kept on their wraps. Other braved the breezes and ate pink ice cream in short sleeves and filmy dresses. High hats and uniforms were conspicuous among the men.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS EXHIBITED BY CLUB

Yellow Rose Exhibit—Mrs. Arthur Harris, first; Mrs. Morris Brandon, second; Mrs. John Goddard, third.

Judges of Blooms.

The judges of the exhibits included a group of experts in flower cultivation. They were Mrs. Samuel Dorsey, Mrs. J. A. McGarity, Mrs. J. Osgood Wynn, Thomas Joy, of Nashville, Tenn.; Philip Schultz, Irving Gresham and Frank Graham.

The proceeds of the small admission charged to view the exhibition will be used by the Peachtree Garden club to beautify the gardens of the home for incurables.

Following the exhibit the flowers were carried by the members to the various hospitals in the city and distributed among the patients.

Garden Club History.

The Peachtree Garden club is composed of a group of prominent society women who are lovers of flowers and interested in the promotion of their cultivation. It was organized more than a year ago that Mrs. Andrew Calhoun invited a group of friends to her home, with the purpose of discussing plans for the formation of a garden club. Mrs. Calhoun is one of Atlanta's most ardent flower lovers. She had been a frequent visitor to the Chattanooga Garden club, which was before her home.

Through these visits came the vision and realization of the civic and cultural value of a garden club to Atlanta. It was Mrs. Calhoun's idea to stimulate the cultivation of thought along artistic and cultural lines by the forming of such a club, and through the exhibits and influence of the organization to create a meaning of such thought could be fixed in the minds of hundreds of Atlanta women.

A few days later this group of women met at the home of Mrs. Jesse Draper, where concrete plans were made and officers elected.

The magnificent gardens surrounding Mrs. Calhoun's handsome home, "Pygmaeson," on Pace's Ferry road, are considered among the most beautiful in the south. Two formal gardens lead a brilliant setting to the front of the home, while at the rear there is a quaint, old-fashioned garden bordered by rich, green foliage. Since the organization of the club the members have given three flower shows, with Mrs. William P. Hill acting as chairman of arrangements for each.

Mrs. Philiz Calhoun, who was elected president of the club at the first meeting, has been most instrumental in making the flower shows successful and valuable. She has given much time and study to garden club programs. She has visited the flower shows sponsored by the garden clubs of Virginia, where she gained a vast knowledge in the exhibition of flowers and shrubbery. Through her leadership there lies a splendid opportunity for the growth and activities of the Peachtree Garden club.

STAYS AND GOES

By Louise Dooly.

WE have been looking over the National, we mean.

And we have come to a determined conclusion.

Something must be done about it.

We have tried to be quite fair in our political survey.

For instance, we make a point of reading both democratic and republican newspapers. When we read the democratic opinion, we are inevitably impressed that Coolidge as a presidential repeater is little more desirable than a Hiram Johnson risk, except that so far he is a better voter.

Then we read the republican papers, and while their spell is over us, we feel that rather than put any of the democratic candidates into office, we had better do like Albania, and invite somebody from the outside to come and rule.

Indeed it does look as if we were about due at least a Napoleon or something, and it would serve us right.

Why We Were a Democrat.

IN sizing up the two great parties, and weighing their respective advantages, we realize that we should consider these advantages as they relate to our own personal interest.

That is the way the male citizen always does, we have ascertained, since we are new, we ought to be conservative.

We were a democrat when it did not make any practical difference what we were; that is, before women were enfranchised. Like all southerners, we were accused of merely imitating the north.

But the truth is, we were a democrat, partly because the democratic party always intrigued us, just as a woman always intrigues a man, and never knew what to expect of it, and so it kept our interest piqued.

Party Fights.

NOW that we have an actual reason for being one thing or the other, we find that women are not contented to be strictly party men at all.

In their brief career under suffrage, women have made it plain that they are not going to be bound by party lines, when the principles of the platform or the candidates of the other side are more to their liking. It has become so common for them to take an independent course, that party distinction for women, anyway—is not the political crime it used to be. (The south is largely an exception so far, but as we said before, we are taking a rational viewpoint.)

It is much like that other situation. When is a rebellion not a rebellion? Nowhere, that is a success. Then it is a revolution.

We suspect, too, that women, in this flirting with party, are using a bit of the arts feminine. They know that mystery, elusiveness, is a part of their arm as women. Certainly they have been told so often enough.

Why, then, should they not make the same method effective politically?

Widows in Politics.

PROPHETS who were not acute had predicted that suffrage for women would stimulate the organization of the widows. The women would vote as their husbands and fathers did.

Right here occurs a big thought.

There are oodles of women like ourselves who are unattached, and which ever party is absolutely independent.

On the knees of the gods, as it were.

Why, then, may not we, the spinsters and widows, really command the balance of power between the two great parties?

Some wives will vote the republican tickets because their husbands do, and as many the democratic, because their husbands are democrats.

But the spinsters and widows are not so easily led. They are perfectly loyal this year to one party, and four years from now, perfectly loyal to the other.

We would propose an organization, offering this column for campaign purposes exclusively, to launch and perfect such a movement.

Some wives will vote the republican tickets because their husbands do, and as many the democratic, because their husbands are democrats.

Largo Versus Scherzo.

JUST now we are hesitating between the offers made us to attend the Cleveland and New York conventions. We can't go to both, and we don't want to be fair to our country and ourself.

Every indication points 'to the prospect that the Cleveland convention will be a genuine rest cure, and that sort of junket is not to be despised in this era of such fast living that the whole country has to support better homes for a week annually in order to keep people reminded that they have any homes at all.

The democrats, however, are going to have a regular wake.

And after all, why not enjoy a nice impersonal wake? None of us will ever get any fun out of our own.

The harmony that too often suggests another is not going to have a look-in at Madison Square garden, if we can judge by preliminaries.

Why, there is no agreement even about the festival of patriotism. The Agnes Scott Glee club sang de-lightfully at the morning session, and Misses Walton and Winfree rendered beautiful solos.

The next day the news services inform us that Irving Berlin is going to be the Gatti-Casazza of the democratic festival of patriotism. And Irving Berlin is no nerve specialist, to give 'em cradle songs.

Evolutionary Democracy.

A FINAL argument in favor of a New York is that the opening event will be a dance and buffet supper, engineered by a committee of the democratic women.

This is the first time such a thing has ever happened to any political convention, it is said. We believe it. And while we have not yet seen the democrats eat, and that would hold no particular novelty or interest, we confess we do yearn to see William Jennings Bryan dance.

New Club.

New clubs added to the fifth district during the past year as reported by Mrs. Oscar Palmour, included: Peachtree Garden club, W. End Woman's club, Osteopathic Woman's club, Grady hospital auxiliary, the Dante circle, Decatur Woman's club, the War Mothers' Service Star Legion of Fulton county, Georgia, Decatur Woman's club, Hoosier Woman's club, Applying for membership: Woman's civic club, of West End, and the Drama League.

Presentation of a handsome silver trophy given by Latham & Atkinson, jewelers, as a reward for forestry work, was made by Mrs. B. B. Gray, of College Park. The trophy will be awarded annually to the club making the best record in this service each year.

Clubs reporting through their president occupied much of the business session. Mrs. T. T. Stevens, reporting for the largest unit in the district, the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke of the Memorial Shelter at Hospital No. 48, recently dedicated as said by the hospital authorities to be the only memorial erected at any hospital in the United States by organized women.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, as president of the largest individual club in the district, the Atlanta Woman's club, reported a year of splendid achievement and announced that the Wilson Memorial avenue in Morning-side Park will be dedicated on Sunday, May 25. This avenue, Mrs. Richardson described as two miles in length and planted on either side with seed and crepe myrtle trees. At a designation.

Tallahul School.

Tallahul school was emphasized throughout the meeting, practically every club, reporting special work for the state. Mrs. John King Otley, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, past president of the state; Mrs. C. K. Ayer, and Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith stressed this subject through brief speeches. Mrs. Fitzpatrick, distinguished guest at the meeting, spoke enthusiastically of the rapid materialization of plans for a new building at the school, to be ready at the opening of the fall session, at which time 60 pupils will be cared for by the school instead of the 22 of the past year.

Mrs. Otley announced five new scholarships recently given the school by endorsement. Mrs. T. T. Stevens, treasurer of Tallahul, reported district payments being made more promptly than ever before. Mrs. Price-Smith announced postponement until fall of the annual pilgrimage to Tallahul, for years a feature of district work in the spring.

Welfare work as advocated by the welfare department of the state of Georgia was presented at the afternoon session by Dr. Davis' statistics on health work in Georgia showed appalling lack of sufficient support. Mrs. J. E. Summerfield, past president of the Council of Jewish Women, presented a report as chairman of health work for the district, making important suggestions.

Club institutes as they will be conducted in June and July by Mercer university and the University of Georgia, at Athens, were discussed by Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, of Macon, and Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens. Mrs. Sanford emphasized the fact that the institute at Athens will offer an intensive course in training for federation work, while Dr. Weaver declared Mercer institute will draw together the great organizations of the state and seek to correlate their various activities.

Resolutions passed by the district endorsed the world court resolution supported by the general federation. Forestry conservation was urged by resolution. Atlanta's opportunity school was endorsed by resolution. The plan brought before the recent state executive board meeting calling for biennial conventions in place of annual conventions was approved.

A WORD TO WOMEN

A hundred and twenty-one thousand women would comprise a vast army. Yet a canvass was recently made among more than that number of women who had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for various ailments. The result proved that ninety-eight out of every hundred reported benefit from its use. This is most remarkable evidence of the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the ills of womanhood, and should influence every sick and ailing woman to try it. (adv.)

Daniel, newly elected head of the Southern Baptist convention, made a stirring talk to the W. M. U. regarding the $75,000,000 campaign.

"America has been given the reputation of being the most lawless nation in the world," stated Mrs. E. Hillon Jackson, representative from the District of Columbia of the Woman's Missionary union, in an address Thursday morning.

"If the men who make the laws patronize the bootleggers and furnish them with a livelihood, they can hardly expect others in the nation to observe the laws they themselves ignore," she said. "It was a sad example for the American people when the prohibition committee met in Washington and the very next day newspapers were broadcasting the fact that the men who make our laws were entertained in a wild escapade the night before."

Mrs. W. C. James, Baltimore, was re-elected president of the Women's Missionary union meeting Thursday afternoon in the Baptist Tabernacle. CHAPTER XLII.

The strange duel between Ahmed and Felice was conducted on the same lines of quiet hostility which had marked the arrangements.

Ahmed called round for Felice at the Grillon, and they met Mordac by appointment on the corner of the Rue Royale. Felice insisted that he should ride with Ahmed but Ahmed insisted more strongly that Mordac make the journey with Felice.

"I trust, monsieur," he said, "that I shall have the pleasure of driving Monsieur le Comte back to Paris as his breakfast."

So they went out together, Ahmed in front, alone, and Felice humming along behind him.

To Ahmed there was a sensation of absolute unreality about the ride along the wonderful straight road which leads to the Porte Maillot and the Bois de Boulogne. He was, of course, going to beat Felice at the dice game. He had right on his side.

They swung off to the left at Luna park, and at last reached that section of road which was nearest to the glade they had selected. They left the cars at the immediately turned, and Felice, of all three of them, had the most to say. He deposited a brown bag on the ground and from it he took a sealed package, a folded check, a bottle of champagne, three glasses and a little bottle which Ahmed knew must contain the veronal.

"There," he said, "the veronal prop- erties are here, and the play can start. Mordac—as what I might term the neutral power in this little argument—may I ask you to open the wine?"

"Certainly," Mordac opened the bottle and poured the sparkling liquid into the glasses. He handed one to Felice, who immediately turned, and with a bow, handed it on to Ahmed.

"Will you favor me?" he asked. Each had his glass and it was Felice who proposed the toast.

"Each of us carries in his heart the memory of some woman who is, to him, the most wonderful in the world. Gentlemen! To the woman we love!"

They drank, and while Mordac and Felice set their glasses down soberly, Ahmed cast his from him, so that it fell beyond the bushes and was lost.

Neither Mordac nor Felice commented upon the action.

"Now," said Felice, "perhaps Monsieur le Comte will state the conditions of the game."

Mordac opened the chessboard—a large one—and laid it on the grass.

"In this sealed package," he said, "are three ivory dice and an ivory shaker. They were purchased by me, and sealed in the shop, after which I handed them over to Signor Donatelli in case, by accident, I was prevented from attending here this morning."

He stooped and picked up the little bottle, and his face was very grave.

"In this bottle is sufficient veronal to kill three men. It is proposed that the loser consumes the whole quantity. You are agreed on that, gentlemen?"

They both bowed.

Mordac set the bottle down in the bag, and took up the package.

"I propose to break the seal, and myself throw the dice several times to convince both of you that they have not been tampered with, and—"

Ahmed interrupted. "I would suggest, monsieur, that such an implication is an insult to yourself and Signor Donatelli."

Mordac opened the package and poured three dice on the chessboard, afterwards standing beside the little ivory shaker.

"The game," said Mordac, "the one spots will be ace, the highest points on the dice, with the other numbers running from six down to two. All three dice will be thrown at once, and the scoring will be as follows. Three of a kind will beat any two. Three aces, of course, would be unbeatable, and only equalled by three aces. Two of a kind will beat any ragged score. In the event of each dice showing up a different number—which I have called a ragged score—the total sum of the points will be taken, the aces, in such cases, counting as one point only. Do you understand and agree?"

Mordac continued. "There will be three throws each, taken alternately, each throw constituting a game. The winner of two of the games out of the three will be the winner of the match. The throws are to be long, so that the dice roll. You will make one cast each to decide for first throw in the actual game."

They prepared.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Ahmed would have dispensed with the preliminary throw, but both Felice and Mordac insisted on it.

Ahmed gathered the dice and dropped them both into the ivory receptacle. His hands and his brain were extraordinarily steady.

He threw. Three sixes!

Felice smiled. "An omen! In the preliminary he throws all but the top score!"

Mordac broke in. "Signor, I forgot. In my explanation, I insist upon silence during the match."

"I apologize."

Felice gathered the dice and threw them. They showed a deuce, a four, and a six.

Ahmed had won the right to throw first.

Now Mordac took a hand. He took up the dice himself, placed them in the shaker, and handed it to Ahmed.

"I shall do this for each throw," he said, "Monsieur, the game will open."

Ahmed threw, and the little white dice rolled and hopped across the board. Two of them stopped—aces! The third trickled to the edge and dropped off to the grass.

Mordac gestured. "Unfortunately, monsieur. Again!"

This time all the dice stayed on the board. There were two sixes and a three.

Felice straightened himself. He shook and thirped. They stayed on the board, though one strayed perilously close to the edge.

There were two fours and an ace. Ahmed had won the first game.

Ahmed found himself breathing deeply. Felice was smiling, but the smile was mischievous.

"There are two glasses here, messieurs," said Mordac, "and a great deal more champagne in the bottle. May I offer you some refreshment?"

Noozie

IN THE SPRING A YOUNG MAN'S FANCY SERIOUSLY TURNS TO TRYING NOT TO BLUSH!

Ahmed shook his head. He could not speak. Felice swallowed the cup of wine at a single draught.

Mordac gathered the dice. "Second game!" He handed the shaker to Ahmed.

A bad throw—a five, a three and a deuce.

Then Felice took a deuce and a four. Felice had scraped through the second game with the tiniest margin in hand.

They were equal, with the last game before them—the game on which hung life and death.

"You will still take no refreshment, monsieur?" asked Mordac of Ahmed. Again Ahmed shook his head.

But Felice accepted another cup. "There is now," said Mordac composedly, "sufficient wine for the winner and myself to toast the loser, and yet leave enough for the loser to take his last drink. Ready?"

They nodded. There was no need now for his imposition of silence. Neither of them could have spoken a word.

Ahmed's hand was now trembling, and the dice jumped as they struck the board, jumbled and flickered and rolled. Yet they stayed on the checkers and came to a standstill.

Three sixes!

Mordac's eyebrows lifted slightly. There was the suspicion of a smile about his lips. It was as good as victory.

Ahmed, staring at the dice, heard Felice's breath come in a long, drawn hiss, and looked up.

Mordac gathered the dice gravely and handed the shaker to him. Ahmed sat back.

Felice threw. All three of them watched the dice as they trickled across the board.

One stopped—a three!

It was defeat. The second stopped—a four!

The third rolled on and dropped off the board.

"Mother of God!"

Felice breathed it, despite Mordac's injunction.

"Another throw, signor," said Mordac quietly.

Felice almost snatched the shaker from Mordac's hand.

He rattled and threw.

And with that throw something told Ahmed that he was going to lose. It came down on him suddenly like a cloak of despair. He watched the dice, almost without seeing them.

"Three aces," said Mordac quietly. "Signor Donatelli, I declare you to be the winner." And added: "D'un nom! it is almost a miracle!"

Felice got to his feet. He was very silent, though his lips were moving. And Ahmed sat and looked at the dice.

He was now the principal figure in this little tragedy. It was for him to move.

Somehow he bowed to both of them. "Messieurs," he said, "I will wish you a very good morning."

Felice choked. There were tears in his eyes. All that was good in him rushed suddenly to the surface. He stepped forward impulsively, his hand outstretched.

"Signor! I—I—"

He stopped; then, he looked on. "You have my apologies. For all that I have said and done, for everything, I crave your pardon. It shall be my lifelong regret that I insulted so brave a man."

Ahmed took his hand. "Thank you, monsieur."

Felice added: "I shall go away from Paris—today."

And Ahmed knew, from that, that Felice was telling him La Phalene was free of him.

For that I also thank you," he turned to Mordac. "Monsieur, I would compliment you upon your conduct of this affair, and I would like to express my gratitude to you for attending this morning. Goodby."

"With your permission, monsieur?" he said to Ahmed.

Ahmed bowed.

They walked off together towards the tree belt, and as they entered the shadows Felice cast a look over his shoulder. Ahmed was on his knees on his outspread jacket, with his forehead between his hands. His head was towards the east.

Felice sobbed.

Mordac drove slowly, and it was late when they went through the Porte Maillot and so back to Paris.

In this way Mordac avoided meeting the car of La Phalene, and also failed to encounter another car, of whose journeying he was unaware—the car which contained Kendrick and Lolette.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Elise sat on the night had been so long that her memory hardly seemed to carry back beyond it.

She took the big Rolls Royce the Englishman had given her, and set out for the Bois de Boulogne. She started, thinking she had plenty of time, at the moment Ahmed made the first throw in the game.

At the farther end of the Avenue de la Grande Armee she passed another car going in the same direction. It contained a man and a woman, but she did not take any notice of them. They were Kendrick and Lolette.

After a number of turns she swung a corner. Ahead of her, standing alone, was Ahmed's car.

Something within her went cold, on the sight of it, dreadfully cold.

Elise got out. Everything was very still and quiet. She looked at the clock on her dashboard. It wanted two minutes to the quarter. She was, if Mordac's information was correct, two minutes ahead of time. Yet only Ahmed was there.

She walked through the edge of the trees, and on in the direction of the glade. He had made a pillow of his jacket. Beside him was the champagne bottle.

She stood still for a little while. Then she called his name.

"Ahmed!"

It was ridiculous, she knew, for he was dead. She kept telling herself that. Ahmed was dead! She ran across to him on impulse.

"Ahmed!"

She sank to her knees beside him. He looked very calm and very resolute. He might certainly have been alive and asleep.

But he was dead—dead because she

I DON'T KNOW WHY I LET MRS. HAMMER TALK ME INTO LEAVING THAT MAN—THE MORE I THINK IT OVER THE MORE I REALIZE WHAT A FOOLISH GIRL I WAS—IF ANYTHING SHOULD HAPPEN TO ANY WHILE I WAS GONE I'D NEVER FORGIVE MYSELF.

WELL, MIN, AS I TOLD YOU, YOUR PLACE IS BY HIS SIDE—YOU AND AFTER THAT HIS LITTLE FAILINGS ARE NOT SO IMPORTANT.

had been foolish, dead because she had joked at his expense, dead for her. She clutched his coat. She leaned all across him. Her hair was loosened and hung half down about her white neck and her smooth shoulders.

She heard the bushes crackle. She heard twigs break sharply under booted feet, and looked up, across the body of Ahmed, to the edge of the tree belt.

So she saw Kendrick, who had come back from the east to look for her, bringing with him the memory of little Elise of the Rue Jacques.

Her lips twisted. The tears ran salt into her mouth.

She said: "Oh, God!" weakly. The glade was very quiet.

CHAPTER XLV.

Kendrick came toward her. She had forgotten Ahmed altogether. She had forgotten everything except Kendrick. She could see nothing except Kendrick's face.

He stood over her, while she crouched at his feet, her hands still resting on Ahmed's lapels.

He broke the silence.

"May I help you to your car?" She nodded. He saw, with alarm, that her gaze was becoming fixed.

"Help me," she repeated. "Help!" Then, "Fancy you—coming back. I thought you had forgotten—forgot—"

She had straightened herself during this. "You had forgotten, hadn't you?"

He caught her as she dropped forward, and he picked her up very easily and carried her out through the trees to the car, where Lolette waited.

Lolette expressed the liveliest surprise at sight of Elise fainting in Kendrick's arms, and began to voice it.

but Kendrick cut her short. In truth, he felt rather bewildered. Lolette had been too overwhelmingly hospitable. It was an extraordinary coincidence that she should have indicated the two cars by the roadside, and had said one of them was certainly the Rolls Royce the Englishman had given La Phalene. Why not ask her to drive home with them? But now, he began to wonder. It all fitted together so beautifully. And there was the dead man. Why was he dead? And why was La Phalene found beside him?

He said to Lolette: "Something very dreadful has happened. I think you would be well advised to drive straight home. You can take my car—I shall drive this lady home if you will give me her address."

Lolette was too clever an actress to betray herself. She made as though to ask him what it all meant, and then gave a display of changing her mind and submitting to his advice without question.

On Kendrick was forced a quick decision. He had either immediately to inform the authorities of his discovery, and endeavor to keep La Phalene's name out of the affair, or else to leave Ahmed where he was until the body was inevitably found within the next few hours. He determined to take her home and say nothing.

His run back to Paris was swift and secret.

CHAPTER XLVI.

At 3 o'clock Kendrick came to see Elise, and was received in the fantastic lounge apartment. The whole place struck a discordant note within him.

Elise was very white and ill. She looked old, incredibly old, old not in features nor in greyness of hair, but old in knowledge.

Kendrick, on sight of her, remembered only that he stood in the presence of the most beautiful woman he had ever known; a woman beside whom the little Elise he had met before was just winsome and sweet. He took her hand and bent low over it. If she expected him to kiss it she was disappointed.

"Well," she asked.

He tried to be crisp and business-like.

"Ahmed el Yezzed was discovered within an hour of our departure."

Her breath came quickly. "Yes."

"He had left a letter addressed to the chief of the Surete. It was enclosed another letter to his father. I have managed to discover what the letter to the police contained. It said that he died by his own hand, for a reason which he preferred not to state."

"I see," she said at last. "So Ahmed goes out, like a gentleman, and Felice is free."

"Felice?" Kendrick repeated the name involuntarily.

"Felice Donatelli. They were friends of mine. Do you know why Ahmed died? It was because of me. It was a duel!"

"Good God!" Kendrick stared at her. Words were useless in face of her horrified pose.

She went on. "It was in this room. I was mad—mad. I set them against each other. I thought it was clever. It was because of me he died."

Kendrick had an impulse to lean forward and pat her hand as though she were a child.

The program begins at 8:45 o'clock, continuing until 9:15 o'clock.

$17,959 VERDICT AGAINST MANGET

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.

OF many thousands of visitors in Atlanta on account of the Southern Baptist convention, no one has a more romantic career than Captain I. N. Johnston, of Pleasureville, Ky., who comes to Atlanta again as a visitor, after an absence of 82 years. When Captain Johnston was here before, he was a prisoner under the watchful eye of one William Tecumseh Sherman.

Captain Johnston is a thoroughbred Methodist, but he comes to the convention with his son, who is superintendent of the Bible class in the Pleasureville Baptist church. While here he is spending his time viewing some of the scenes of his former days of romance and adventure.

Mr. Manget had refused payment on account of an alleged set-off and damages growing out of the transaction. He set up in his answer to the construction company's suit against him that the company damaged him in estimating the cost of the annex and a roof garden for the hotel at less than it eventually charged. He alleged the estimate for the entire job was $241,350, including 7 per cent commission for the company, whereas this was exceeded by $25,473.88. He prayed a judgment for the latter amount.

Attorneys McElreath and Scott represented the construction company, while the Rev. W. A. Fairman & Barrett represented Mr. Manget.

He tired of the rations after four months, and, with 14 other southerners, effected his escape through a 60-foot tunnel. Returning home for a short time, he again joined his comrades in the Confederate army. He was captured and put in the hands of the Union army. He continued with the army until his executive head, he was then retained because of his valuable counsel could not be spared.

Vet, in Prison Here in 1863, Amazed at Growth of City

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.

OF many thousands of visitors in Atlanta on account of the Southern Baptist convention, no one has a more romantic career than Captain I. N. Johnston, of Pleasureville, Ky., who comes to Atlanta again as a visitor, after an absence of 82 years. When Captain Johnston was here before, he was a prisoner under the watchful eye of one William Tecumseh Sherman.

Captain Johnston is a thoroughbred Methodist, but he comes to the convention with his son, who is superintendent of the Bible class in the Pleasureville Baptist church. While here he is spending his time viewing some of the scenes of his former days of romance and adventure.

Mr. Manget had refused payment on account of an alleged set-off and damages growing out of the transaction. He set up in his answer to the construction company's suit against him that the company damaged him in estimating the cost of the annex and a roof garden for the hotel at less than it eventually charged. He alleged the estimate for the entire job was $241,350, including 7 per cent commission for the company, whereas this was exceeded by $25,473.88. He prayed a judgment for the latter amount.

GROSSMAN PARCER
DECLARE INVALID

Chicago, May 15.—President Coolidge exceeded his authority in pardoning Philip Grossman, Chicago saloonkeeper, sentenced to jail for contempt of court by former Federal Judge K. M. Landis, according to opinions handed down today by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson and Judge George A. Carpenter.

As a result of the opinions, Grossman was in jail tonight beginning the serving of a year's jail sentence, of which he had not previously served any portion, due to the fact that he received executive clemency before he was incarcerated. The case, recently investigated by the senate Judiciary committee, had its inception when Grossman was brought before former Judge Landis in 1922 for violating an injunction restraining him from selling liquor. He was sentenced for contempt, but the case was appealed until last March, when commitment papers were issued for him, but a pardon from the white house arrived before he had been apprehended and placed in jail.

Submit Written Opinions.
Judge Carpenter wrote and read the opinion deciding the president had no authority to pardon Grossman, and Judge Wilkerson concurred, but submitted a supplementary opinion giving his reasons for so doing.

The judges termed the matter "a political question," but made no effort to determine the moral propriety of the particular pardon involved, limiting themselves to the question of presidential power in case of contempt.

They decided the president cannot have pardoning powers in contempt cases, without infringing upon the constitutional province of the judicial branch of the government.

"The power to punish for contempt," the decision said, "is inherent and essential to the very existence of the judiciary. If the president is allowed to substitute his discretion for that of the courts in this vital matter, then truly the president becomes the ultimate source of judicial authority."

Would Distort Principle.
"Such a holding would be a distortion of that cardinal principle of American institutions, that the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government are co-ordinate and proudly independent."

"We are of the opinion that under the constitution, the executive cannot draw to himself all the real judicial power of the nation by controlling the inherent and essential attributes of that power—the authority to punish for disobedience of orders of the court."

The opinion ended by ordering the United States marshal to take Grossman into custody, which was done, and Grossman was taken to jail after his attorneys had been refused plea for a stay.

Grossman's attorneys said tonight they will file a writ of habeas corpus with the clerk of the supreme court at Washington, and said that the case will be fought to the final authority. Grossman had no statement to make when taken to jail, where he gave his occupation as a clerk and was assigned to work on records at the institution.

OMIT TENDS ON SOUTHERN MILLS

Boston, May 15.—Dividends on the preference and preferred stocks, both cumulative, of the New England Southern Mills for the first quarter of this year will be omitted, President S. Harold Greene announced in a letter to stockholders made public tonight. The letter said that the textile industry "is still passing through a period of unprecedented depression" and the directors deem it wise to omit the dividends of $157,500, although they "have been more than earned" in order to conserve cash for working capital.

For the quarter ending March 31, last, he says the corporation earned $298,000 after interest and depreciation, adding:

"This result includes no earnings from the new plants of the company, which are now coming into production and should be full operating by early fall. The experience of the past four months fully justifies the confidence of the directors that the group of mills can successfully compete for business and can operate under normal conditions at a substantial profit."

FLOOD RELIEF WORK
PUSHED IN VIRGINIA

Richmond, Va., May 15.—With the waters of the James and other rivers and streams rapidly returning to normal, work of rehabilitation in Virginia flood areas pressed forward today. Only remedial rains were now considered as a possible cause of further damage, and with fair weather and rising temperature forecast by the local weather bureau, that is not anticipated.

Many highways and roads throughout the state are still impassable, but it is thought they will be in condition again in several days.

Traffic over the James river division of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad was resumed this afternoon, when long lines of freight cars had been tied up for three days began to move.

A comprehensive survey of damage done is not yet possible, but it is believed that property damage was held to a minimum, due to timely warnings sent out by E. W. Evans, of the United States weather bureau.

The Half-Time Wife

CHAPTER 41.

The Gay Conspirators.

"It may not be the most luxurious home in all New York," Suzanne chuckled as she rushed across the tiny living room and flung open a door revealing a gas stove and some cupboards. "But I think we can make it livable."

"Oh, and it will be all ours, Dick's and mine," Lolita sighed rapturously. "And to think that it was our suggestion. You must understand that I appreciate all you have done for me—you made me welcome in your home, but you were right when you said that there was nothing else meant so much to a young couple as having a place of their very own."

Suzanne turned and started busily untangling the many bundles they had brought with them, stopping only when Lolita rushing round peering into closets and under window curtains that she should come and take a look.

"Even the rasping noise of a dumb waiter sounds like beautiful music," Lolita exclaimed, clasping her hands with delight.

"And washing swinging in the wind looks like gigantic and beautiful blossoms when you see it from your own window," I suppose," laughed Suzanne, striding off toward the bathroom with a mop and pail.

"By the time Dick is well enough to climb four flights and we tell him that thanks to you there is a home for him, we'll have everything done. Floors scrubbed, chairs painted like new, and I may even have finished my pride and joy—curtains of bargain cretonne."

Lolita pulled out a big package and started unwrapping it.

"Oh, you'll ruin your hands sewing on that stuff," Suzanne exclaimed. "Don't do it. Let me buy you some curtains all-made."

I guess Lady Bountiful if you can scrub floors for my nice young husband, the least I can do is sacrifice one pair of hands to the making of curtains. They never were any use to me before except to swing upstage just before I said my one line. Here comes the famous Mr. Pennington now, anyway."

There was a joyous note in Lolita's voice that Suzanne had never heard before. How happy everything would be, she mused, if they could just escape Mrs. Vale and all their worries as easily as they had been slipping away recent afternoons to the little apartment they had found and rented.

"Everything complete," Lolita ejaculated. "Dancing across the room and laughingly straightening a rusty broom on the closet door. Even to openers and dish mops. She surveyed the array of utensils from the tattered store proudly while Suzanne stared disapprovingly at the manipulation of the mop as she had seen her publishers do it.

"What would Geoff say if he knew?" Suzanne in her light-hearted mood found herself thinking aloud a habit she had almost lost with the taciturn Geoff.

"And what would Dick say?"

"He would say," a voice hailed them from the door, "that he was never more surprised in his life nor more out of breath."

He sunk on a nearby chair and smiled up to something. You've acted just like conspirators in a comic opera all day smiling significantly at each other and whispering in corners. Finally today my curiosity got the better of me and I followed you here in a taxi. This is a big surprise—but I admit, I've a surprise for you too."

PORTO RICANS SELECT
GOVERNOR IN 1932

Springfield, Mass., May 15.—The limitation to eight years of the bishop's tenure in any one area residence in this country, formerly indefinite, was approved by the Methodist Episcopal general conference here today. The change was regarded as radical, and opponents of the measure said it would decrease the effectiveness of episcopal supervision.

The resolution as adopted read: "The general conference instructs the committee on episcopacy that in assigning bishops to residences the committee shall have in mind the principle of a maximum of continuous tenure of eight years in any given residence."

The resolution affects only the coming quinquennial bill memorializing the principle permanent is under consideration by the episcopacy committee. Among the bishops who may be affected by the ruling are Bishops Joseph P. Berry, of Philadelphia; Theodore S. Henderson, of Detroit; Luther R. Wilson, of New York; Edwin H. Hughes, of Malden, and William P. McDowell, of Washington. He is in minority. RAPS LOVER OF MONEY OVER SPIRITUAL THINGS

Pointing to steadfast faith in God as only solution of the modern problem of doubt and dismay, J. J. Taylor delivered one of the most effective talks of the Southern Baptist Bible conference Thursday afternoon at the First Baptist church on "Deliverance from Current Turmoil."

Materialism was indicated as the tap root of modern dissatisfaction by the speaker. Men love money more than the spiritual things, he said, declaring that this "same spirit has even invaded the institutions of religion. A single issue of a denominational paper recently had 51 articles to raise money, not to mention a political contribution with the same end. In the entire issue, there was not a line to strengthen one's faith."

The speaker declared "infidel literature" could be bought for five cents a selection today, whereas Christian literature still sells for upwards of a dollar a book.

All modern ills are referable to the one central cause of godlessness and neglect of the things of purely spiritual value, the speaker declared.

PEACH SUPPORTERS CLAIM BIG VICTORY

Fort Valley, Ga., May 15.—(Special.)—At midnight the so-called

Peach county faction was claiming the election of all of its candidates in the primary election of today. It was claimed that the Peach county candidates would get fully 1,250 of the 1,401 votes cast in Fort Valley, which would more than offset the lead of opposing candidates in other precincts combined with the Perry votes, even though Perry voted solidly against the Peach county men.

HOUSTON PRIMARY HOTTEST IN YEARS

Perry, Ga., May 15.—Houston had the hottest election in years today, and at midnight Fort Valley and Perry precincts still unreported the result was in doubt. The official consolidation which will be made at the courthouse at noon tomorrow probably will show all of the races to be close.

Fort Valley people tonight were claiming that the men who appear low in the count to date will be in the lead when the returns from all precincts are consolidated.

FARM RELIEF BILL TAKEN UP TUESDAY

Washington, May 15.—The McNary-Haugen farm relief bill will be taken up by the house next week, probably Tuesday, under a legislative schedule worked out today by the rules committee.

After that bill is out of the way, priority will be given the postal salary increase measure, and later the McFadden bill to amend the national bank and federal reserve acts. A house vote on all three proposals is expected before the end of the session.

GIVE MEMORY EXHIBIT TO CONVENTION TODAY

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.

An interesting feature of the morning session of the Southern Baptist convention today will be a demonstration in memory work, to be given by 48 boys and girls from the Vienna, Ga., Baptist Sunday school.

The young people have traveled 175 miles to attend the convention, and to give this demonstration of modern Sunday school methods. The demonstration will begin promptly at 8:45, just before the regular business of the day.

The convention devoted almost six hours of time Thursday to study of the situation confronting work of the foreign missions board. Dr. J. F. Love, of Richmond, secretary of the board, stated the situation is most critical, and declared the convention must either come to the board's relief, or withdraw some of its forces from operating in the foreign fields.

Big Debt Overhauled.

He said an indebtedness of $1,500,000 now hampers the board, and that it has been directed to make certain loans to the convention's seminary work, which also prove a handicap.

He further said the foreign board had received less than 50 per cent of the allotment promised when the 75-million campaign was launched.

Dr. Aubrey Williams, of Virginia, chairman of the convention board to consider the secretary's report, read the report of that special committee, in which it was urged the convention should sound a note of advance along the entire line, wipe out the indebtedness and have the seminary repay the loans made. The committee report also urged the allotment of the 75-million campaign be speedily paid the foreign board. A number of impassioned addresses were made during the consideration of the missionary work.

Women Pledge Aid.

More than 1,000 women from the Woman's Missionary union were in the vast audience that filled the great City Auditorium.

The convention report also assured the convention that, before their meeting came to final adjournment, they had come to a firm resolve to pay their pledges to the last penny.

When the vote on the report was taken, there was not a dissenting voice to the plan that all indebtedness be removed and that the foreign board should be able to operate on the basis of the backing of the Baptist denomination.

The convention body was saddened deeply on learning of the serious accident to Rev. R. L. Bird, of North Carolina, who was run down by an automobile late Thursday afternoon. Word was announced that his life is despaired of, and that he is being cared for in a special ward of the stricken minister, led by Rev. Livingston Johnston, of North Carolina.

The finest opera house in the world is located at Manaus, 1,000 miles up the Amazon river. The structure, built of stone and finest marble, cost $2,000,000.

540 Invitations Issued to Dinner For Art Exhibit

BY RALPH JONES.

The New York Grand Central Art Gallery exhibition of paintings and sculpture, an epoch in the life of Atlanta and the south only equalled by the first coming of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be formally opened by a great banquet at the Biltmore Saturday night.

Five hundred and forty invitations have been issued. Guests will be admitted only on presentation of table cards.

Following the dinner, at 10:30 o'clock will be held the formal opening of the exhibition. The assembly will gather in the ballroom of the Biltmore and be presented to the visiting artists and executives of the galleries.

Invitation List Closed.

The invitation list for the Saturday night banquet was closed Thursday night, and place cards will be made out this morning. All who have accepted invitations will receive their cards, but invitations to those who have not sent word of their acceptance already are withdrawn, it was announced by J. J. Haverly.

Ballroom accommodations also are completely filled, and no further acceptance of invitations will be considered. The banquet will begin at 7:30 o'clock, and to be admitted, guests must be before the Biltmore by 7:15 o'clock, and be required to present their cards at the door.

List of Speakers.

At the formal opening, Governor Walker will speak for the state. Mayor Sims for the city and Carroll Payne, president of the Southern States Art league, and Paul H. Norcross, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, will be other speakers of local prominence.

Among distinguished visitors to speak on the significance of the great event are Robert W. DeForest, of New York, president of the American Federation of Arts; Walter L. Clark, president of the Grand Central Art Galleries; Elliott Dingerfield, a native author and one of the outstanding figures both for quality of work and for picturesque personality, in American art; Oliver Dennett Grover and Jonas Lie, foremost young American painters; and Dudley Crafts Watson, known widely as one of the leading critics and lecturers on art.

BOWDON STUDENTS PLAN SCHOOL SURVEY

Bowdon, Ga., May 15.—Bowdon State Normal and Industrial college is planning an educational survey of Carroll and adjoining counties during the summer and early fall to determine the number of boys and girls of these sections not attending higher institutions of learning, according to announcement by Dr. George W. Camp, president of the school.

Following the survey, steps will be taken to induce those who, in the opinion of the investigators, should be in college to enroll in some higher institutions of learning.

Citizens of Bowdon have recently raised money by subscription and bought fifteen acres of land adjoining the college campus and presented it to the college. This gives the campus an area of approximately twenty acres and affords excellent sites for two dormitories, a central dining hall and other buildings needed by the school, Dr. Camp said.
